The 2000 Portfolio lists BHR/PVC awards funded in fiscal year 1999 and ongoing awards active during the period from October 1, 1998 to September 30, 1999. Program titles are included for awards starting in 1998; and the grantee cost share is included for awards starting in 1999.

Matching Grant Program

The Matching Grant Program allows a U.S. private and voluntary organization (PVO) to expand a successful program in new places or initiate new projects. It also enables a U.S. PVO to undertake an experimental or innovative project on the cutting edge of developmental efforts that offers potential for learning and replication.

Now in its 21st year, the Matching Grant Program is the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation's (PVC) principal vehicle to help U.S. PVOs develop their community-based programs overseas. Matched dollar-for-dollar by the PVO's own resources, Matching Grants support programs consistent with the U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID) evolving priorities (such as micro-enterprise development and strategic partnerships) and geographical interests (such as the special needs of Africa, Central Asia, and Central America).

The Matching Grant Program awards competitive grants to PVOs to support clearly defined, field-oriented programs administered in a number of countries. The programs must be fully conceived and incorporate rigorous evaluation criteria. Such a program may be as broad as the overall scope of a PVO's work, or as specific as community-based health services or micro-enterprise development. The program must be within USAID's legislative mandate and development priorities.

PVOs are awarded matching grants based on their demonstrated ability to implement successful, sustainable development programs. The four major objectives of the Matching Grant Program are the following:

- to expand and strengthen the field programs of U.S. PVOs to increase prospects for sustainability and for results in program areas that are consistent with USAID policies and priorities;
- to assist U.S. PVOs to further enhance their planning systems, management systems, and technical competencies to carry out development programs;
- to build the capacity of local nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), governmental, and community-based organizations (CBOs) through formalized partnerships with U.S. PVOs; and
- to increase U.S. private resources directed to development assistance by matching private contributions on a dollar-for-dollar basis through a combined public and private partnership.

Child Survival Program

The Child Survival Grant Program (CSGP) is a unique and productive partnership supporting effective, community-oriented child survival programs that measurably improve infant and child health and nutrition and contribute to the reduction of infant and child mortality.

Since 1985, the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) has invested congressionally directed Child Survival funds in community-based child survival programs implemented by U.S. private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) and their local partners. The program is intended to enhance the participation of PVOs in reducing infant, child, and maternal mortality in developing countries and to strengthen their organizational, managerial, and technical competencies in these areas. The Bureau of Humanitarian Response (BHR)/PVC works with a broad range of organizations with a spectrum of different skill. Since the program began, BHR/PVC has funded more than 300 child survival programs in 44 countries, with more than 35 PVOs. The rigorous standards of CSGP challenge PVOs and their local partners to provide higher quality, sustainable, child survival interventions in various program settings, from the smallest, most remote communities to large, district-wide programs, partnering with other organizations—from community groups to district health authorities.

The objective of CSGP is to improve the capacity of U.S.-based PVOs and their local partners to carry out effective child survival programs that measurably improve infant and child health and nutrition, and contribute to the reduction of infant and child mortality. PVO CSGP aims for the following:

- increased success of the programs in the CSGP in meeting their objectives and measurably improving the health of children and mothers;
- PVOs and USAID operating units jointly programming for community health activities;
- PVOs' increased resource mobilization for child survival activities;
- PVOs' increased technical and operational support to local partners and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) for the design and implementation of child survival programs; and
- U.S. public awareness of the success of the PVO child survival programs.

The CSGP's priorities for the fiscal year 2000 are that programs meet the following criteria:

1. are carried out in eligible countries and/or program sites with high rates of mortality for children under five years old; (countries and/or program sites with under-5 mortality rates higher than 100 deaths per 1,000 live births are this program's highest priority);
2. apply effective, appropriate child survival strategies, which are deliverable at reasonable costs, and have a high potential for sustainability, within the capability of the applicant and its partners;
3. involve formal partnerships and agreements with a local government, NGO, community partner or other local organization;
4. plan for the financial and institutional sustainability of the program benefits after the end of the grant;
5. adopt viable and innovative strategies, methods, or materials for implementing child survival activities that may be adapted for use by other organizations, or that are applicable on a wider scale; and
6. contribute to USAID development goals and BHR/PVC's strategic objective and intermediate results.

Cooperative Development Program

Cooperatives enable people to achieve self-reliance and lasting economic independence. These member-owned democratic and community-based associations spread economic benefits and provide opportunities for people to participate directly in democratic processes.

The Humphrey Amendment to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, along with other legislation, has allowed the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to dedicate substantial support and financial assistance to U.S. Cooperative Development Organizations (CDOs) to carry out development activities overseas. The Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) administers a competitive grants program for cooperative development. The program uses the expertise and resources of long-established U.S. cooperative organizations, their members, and other experts to respond to the needs of cooperatives and other group-based associations overseas.

The objectives of the Cooperative Development Program are the following:

- build the organizational commitment of U.S. CDOs and their members to support international cooperative development activities;
- promote the growth of cooperative systems in developing countries and emerging democracies;
- increase the capacities of indigenous cooperatives through technical assistance, training, and advisory services;
- encourage the establishment of long-term partnerships between U.S. CDOs and host country organizations, based on sound service, information sharing, and/or economic links, to ensure program sustainability;
- support the program development activities and services of indigenous cooperative development activities internationally; and
- support efforts to broaden the development resource funding base of U.S. CDOs and enhance long-term sustainability of cooperative development activities overseas.

CDOs work in many sectors including credit, agribusiness, technology transfer, housing, micro-enterprise and small business development, financing and marketing, rural telephone and electric services, and insurance. In addition, cooperatives are effective grassroots organizations representing member interests in democratic societies.

CDOs that have long-term association with USAID's Cooperative Development Program may mentor eligible U.S. cooperatives that are interested in partnering to implement cooperative development activities overseas.

Development Education Program

The Development Education Program provides small grants to support the efforts of U.S. nonprofit organizations to educate Americans about developing countries, the development process, and the importance of developing countries to the United States.

The U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID's) Development Education Program was authorized in 1980 in response to the Report of the Presidential Commission on World Hunger (under the Biden-Pell Amendment to the International Security and Development Cooperation Act). In 1982, the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) established a grants program to promote widespread discussion and analysis of the causes of hunger and poverty. The program is referred to as both the Development Education Program and the Biden-Pell Program.

The Development Education Program is a public/private initiative designed to foster interest and participation in international development among U.S. citizens. The program supports activities by private, not-for-profit organizations to educate large segments of the American public about U.S. humanitarian relief and development programs overseas. The program helps build national understanding of the importance of these programs to the United States.

PVC has awarded grants to a broad cross-section of more than 100 organizations, including private voluntary organizations engaged in development assistance; universities; radio, television, and print media; cooperatives; service clubs; trade associations; and national membership organizations.

The Development Education Program's current strategy emphasizes leveraging financial resources and obtaining the maximum educational impact through partnerships between U.S. nonprofit organizations involved in international development and national membership organizations with natural links to large segments of the American public.

Programs supported by the Biden-Pell grants have a theme of "global-local links." In other words, the programs demonstrate the connections between domestic and international concerns and communicate why international development assistance is in the best long-term interest of the United States. Grantees focus on the environment, trade, health, or other issues that resonate in American communities and also demonstrate global interdependence. These issues, presented objectively, stimulate informed discussion about development issues and their connection to U.S. concerns.

DESCRIPTION: To collaborate with the National Peace Corps Association (NPCA) to produce and disseminate presentation and teaching materials for educators around the theme "The World of Child Six-Billion." With the world poised to enter the new millennium, world population will achieve a record 6 billion people. The materials for this project are timeless, but particularly well suited for many specific events such as Peace Corps Day, Earth Day, and World Population Day. This project has already garnered the support of the Peace Corps Office of Domestic Programs through World Wise Schools and the National Geographic Society, which will broaden its dissemination network. This project will provide a broad overview of the world in which Child Six-Billion is likely to live. Using developing country examples, the project will connect specific local concerns to larger human development issues and to people in the United States. Ideally, understanding these connections will help Americans understand that foreign assistance is in their best interest. Learning materials include "The World of Child Six-Billion" guide, curricular and presentation guides, presentations by educators to students and community groups nationwide, and workshops at regional and NPCA conferences.

Ocean Freight Reimbursement - Worldwide Program

The Ocean Freight Reimbursement (OFR) Worldwide Program provides subsidies to enable private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) to ship humanitarian supplies and equipment in support of the PVOs' overseas activities.

The OFR-Worldwide Program is the oldest ongoing PVO support program. Recipients ship a wide variety of goods overseas for use in privately funded development and humanitarian assistance programs. The Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, Section 123 (b), authorized the creation of the program and, as amended, allows the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to subsidize registered U.S. PVOs in their ocean freight transportation costs.

The OFR-Worldwide Program is unique because it offers subsidies to PVOs to ship commodities overseas for use in privately funded development and humanitarian assistance programs. The program is also unique because it allows small and newly registered PVOs to participate in an Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation grant process that is highly competitive, yet less complex.

The OFR-Worldwide Program provides small competitive grants to U.S. PVOs each year. Funds are used to reimburse the PVO's costs to transport donated commodities, such as medical supplies, agricultural equipment, educational supplies, and building equipment to developing countries.

The OFR-World Wide Program helps USAID expand its pool of developing partners by reaching out to small and/or newly registered PVOs and by providing grants to many first-time applicants. In 1999, the Agency funded 51 PVOs in the OFR program. These organizations shipped 7,411 tons of commodities valued at $143 million at a cost of $26 million to the program. Although USAID reimburses the costs of ocean freight, participating PVOs are responsible for ancillary costs, such as commodity acquisition, warehousing, insurance, local transportation, and distribution. The program leverages resources many times the size of the USAID funding. The overall private-public match of OFR activities is 43 to 1.

Farmer-to-Farmer Program

The Farmer-to-Farmer (FTF) Program provides voluntary technical assistance, on a people-to-people basis, to farmers, farm groups, agricultural education institutions, and agribusinesses to enhance the potential for substantial increases in food processing, production, and marketing, which, in turn, stimulates private enterprise and democratic institutions.

The FTF Program was initially authorized by Congress in the 1985 Farm Bill. The program began as a pilot project to provide technical assistance to farmers in Central America and the Caribbean. In 1986, the program was expanded for worldwide operation. In early 1987, the Peace Corps began implementing FTF activities through a Participating Agency Service Agreement (PASA). The FTF Program was re-authorized through 2002 in the 1996 Farm Bill. The original FTF Program is commonly referred to as the Worldwide FTF (WW-FTF) Program.

In 1991, a Special Initiative of the FTF Program was authorized as one of the first U.S. assistance programs for the New Independent States (NIS); and it continues to operate in all twelve of the NIS countries. The program is referred to as the NIS-FTF Program.

As stated in its authorizing legislation, the purpose of the FTF Program is "to assist farmers in increasing food production and distribution by improving the effectiveness of farming and marketing operations." The program relies on the expertise of volunteers from U.S. farms, land grant universities, cooperatives, private agribusinesses, and nonprofit farm organizations to respond to the local needs of farmers and organizations in host countries.

The FTF Program is an effective and flexible mechanism for transferring technology, knowledge, and skills of U.S. agricultural volunteers to farmers, farm groups, agricultural education institutions, and agribusinesses worldwide. Volunteers have been recruited from all 50 states and the District of Columbia. In general, these volunteers are not overseas development professionals, but rather individuals who have domestic careers, farms, and agribusinesses, or are retired and want to participate in development efforts. Volunteers spend about a month in the host country.

FTF volunteers have provided assistance to individual farm enterprises, cooperatives, farmers' associations, agribusinesses, rural credit institutions, and agricultural youth groups. Many times, partnerships develop between host country organizations and U.S. organizations, some of which are formalized by written agreement. The American Farm Bureau Federation, for example, at the state level, has partnered with many private farmers' organizations in the NIS.

In the WW-FTF Program, more than 1,600 volunteer assignments have been completed since 1991 in more than 70 countries. In the NIS Program (NIS-FTF), more than 3,500 assignments have been completed since 1992.

In Farmer-to-Farmer (FTF) focus countries, Peace Corps will work directly with the FTF implementor to request an FTF volunteer. In countries where there is no other FTF implementor, Peace Corps will recruit and field the FTF volunteer. This will prove especially important in the west and central regions of Africa where there are no U.S. Agency for International Development-funded FTF implementors.
