SAWSO staff includes seven program professionals and fifteen field technicians in Africa, Latin America and Asia. SAWSO assists its field officers in screening, planning, implementing and evaluating development projects designed to assist the poor. SAWSO trains indigenous leaders to increase their effectiveness in conducting development projects. SAWSO is also establishing a reference center to disseminate information gained from its development experience.

SAWSO's projects focus on health and family planning; basic and vocational education; agriculture such as marketing and on-the-farm training; housing; community development; and special programs for women, minorities and disadvantaged in both rural and urban areas.

Host Country and Major Donors: Host countries frequently supply technical services such as agricultural extension advisors and handicraft instructors, and space for project activities. The Salvation Army will provide $448,000 of its own funds, plus some services to supplement activities under this grant.
