PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

A. BACKGROUND

In urban centers throughout africa, there is growing disparity between population growth and educational facilities and economic opportunity for the youth of the continent. In Addis Ababa, social problems such as juvenile delinquency, crime, prostitution and vagrancy are posing serious challenges to government authorities and development agencies alike. As far back as 1974, an RRC study concluded that there was a significant problem in Addis Ababa with street children. This situation has been further exacerbated in Addis by the 84/86 famine when many destitute children moved into the urban centers after their families died during the drought. The current drought and civil strife will compound the problem. Forty-six percent of the urban population in Addis Ababa is children and eighty percent of the population is below the poverty level. Many children live in deplorable conditions, eeking out an existence on the street, sleeping in public places, eating and clothing themselves with the money earned daily on the streets. The street children lack the basic amenities of life. Their nutrition is poor and they miss out on educational opportunities. Many of the children who live on the streets of Addis Ababa are orphans from the rural areas. Others are the children of the urban unemployed whose only source of income comes through the begging of their children on the street. A workshop, jointly sponsored by Save The Children/US and the Christian Relief and Development Agency (CRDA) was held in March 1988 to discuss the special problems and needs of the street child in Addis. Representatives from the National Children's Commission, the Municipality of Addis, the Ministry of labor and social affairs, the RRC, the Director of SCF/US and the orphan monitor of US AID have formed a committee that will play a major role in planning and coordinating the work with the street children. A research problem completed by Angela Raven-Roberts, Director of SCF/US, led to the street children project proposal submitted for funding consideration to US AID.

B. IMPLEMENTATION

Studies conducted by the RRC and national children's commission have found that there is a tendency amongst Ethiopia street children to improve their conditions and a willingness to learn skills and develop their potantial. Their choice of a street life is an economic rationalization and is not viewed as a permanent condition, though for many it ends up being so. There is thus a positive psychological and economic base that many agencies can build on.

The objectives of the Grant are to provide financial support for a pilot project, to provide shelter, basic health and washing facilities, counseling and educational support systems and eventually, vocational training to the target population. The grant activities will be conducted in a neighborhood "Kebele" close to the SCF/US Office. Eighty children who live and work in the immediate areas surrounding the Ghion Hotel, stadium, railway station and commercial bank will be selected for the project. A team of Qualified social workers, Health assistant and teachers will get to know the children, understand the problems and together work out strategies to help them. A site will be established where shoemaking and repair, tailoring, mechanics and bicycle repair, weaving, pottery making, woodworking and basic electrical repair will be taught, addressing the goal of economic self-reliance and main-streaming into the society. There will be a base with washing (personal and laundry) facilities, a first-aid post, a central meeting place where the children can gather and get regular counseling and basic literacy and numeracy skills.

The project is designed in yearly stages over a three year period. Year one activities which is supported by this USAID Grant include the following:

- Selection of project site
- Installation of facilities
- Recruitment of neighborhood Committee
- Development of yearly plan
- Screen and select children
- Open clinic and counseling service
- Schedule and begin literacy classes
- Develop process of participant/observer of
  - Social workers who will define coping
  - Mechanism, survival strategies and gatser
  - Background information of street kids
- Consolidate relationship with children
- Develop vocational training program

The social workers and project manager will meet regularly to monitor activities and receive training from the SCF program development officer. Detailed profiles of the children will be kept, both to monitor the program as well as to create a data bank on the background, causes and coping and survival strategies of the street child phenomenon. Monthly reports will be made to the SCF/US office and US AID.
