Summary By Program

2

Matching Grant Program

Matching Grants are highly competitive awards to PVOs to support a clearly defined and delineated, field-oriented program to be carried out in a number of countries. The program must be well conceived and incorporate rigorous evaluation criteria. Such a program may be as broad as the overall scope of a PVO's work or as specific as community-based health services or small enterprise development. It must be consistent with A.I.D.'s legislative mandate and with country development priorities. The grant will normally allow a PVO to expand a proven program to new places and initiate new projects. Additionally, the matching grant may allow a PVO to professionalize further its management systems and technical backstopping of its field programs.

Child Survival & Vitamin A Program

Under this program which began in FY 1985, competitive grants are awarded to PVOs engaged in primary health programming as part of their international development efforts. Project activities are designed to have a demonstrable effect on the health status of children and mothers living in target areas through the delivery of a select number of simple, cost-effective technologies. Oral rehydration therapy and immunizations are the primary interventions delivered through the child survival grants. At least 25 percent of the project costs must be borne by the grantee.

Cooperative Development Program

Cognizant of the advantages that cooperatives have in accelerating development, A.I.D. provides support to U.S. cooperative development organizations (CDOs) to enable them to strengthen developing world cooperative movements by organizing local cooperatives and credit unions, strengthening cooperative federations, training cooperative managers and technicians, and encouraging the use of cooperative structures in developing projects. Cooperative development is accomplished through the following components: (1) Cooperative Program Support Grants strengthen and expand the CDOs' capability to conduct international programs/projects; and (2) Cooperative Initiative Grants encourage innovative programs, especially those which mobilize additional outside resources and bring new cooperative actors into the development process.

Development Education Program

The Development Education Program is a competitive, cost-shared, small grants program, initiated in FY 1982 to increase the awareness of the American public of the social, political, technical, and economic factors pertaining to world hunger and related developmental issues. The program supports the efforts of private voluntary organizations and universities to achieve this objective. Development Education Grants are targeted to program initiatives that facilitate broad public participation and innovative educational approaches, and that create outreach efforts directed to the media, educational associations, and other important influence groups.

Farmer-to-Farmer Program

Since its inception in 1985, the Farmer-to-Farmer Program has provided short-term technical assistance, on a people-to-people basis. The purpose of the program is to provide assistance in the practical aspects of increasing food production and distribution and improving the effectiveness of farming operations. The Agricultural Development and Trade Act of 1990 reauthorized the program, and amended it to target development countries, emerging democracies and middle-income countries. The Act also doubled the available funding for this program, and encouraged the participation of PVOs, cooperative development organizations, non-governmental organizations and private agribusinesses. Following the legislative mandate, A.I.D. instituted an annual competitive program in FY 1991 with a view to seeking new creative approaches to this developmental concept. This program is managed by the office of Private and Voluntary Assistance and funded under Public Law 480.
