Summary By Program

Matching Grant Program

Matching Grants are awarded to private voluntary organizations (PVOs) for clearly conceived, evaluable, field-oriented programs to be carried out in a number of countries, that are consistent with A.I.D.'s legislative mandate and that support a clearly defined, delineated program. The Matching Grant program may be as broad as the overall scope of the PVO's work or as specific as community-based health services or small enterprise development. The matching grant will normally allow a PVO to expand its program to new places and to initiate new projects. Matching Grants are awarded to PVOs with well-established development programs and with demonstrated private fund-raising ability. The grant may have a term of 3 to 5 years and is matching in the sense that A.I.D. will pay no more than 50 percent of the cost of the program. Through the Matching Grant, A.I.D. directly supports small enterprise development, local institution-building, and technology adaptation and transfer directly as they result from programs in agriculture and rural development, health, education and energy.

Child Survival Program

Beginning in FY 1985, competitive grants were awarded to private voluntary organizations (PVOs) engaged in primary health programs as part of their international development efforts. The project activities are designed, through the delivery of a select number of simple cost-effective technologies, to demonstrably enhance the health status of children and mothers living in target areas. Oral rehydration therapy and immunizations are the primary interventions delivered through the Child Survival grants. At least 25 percent of the project costs must be borne by the grantee.

Cooperative Development Program

Cognizant of the advantages that cooperatives have in accelerating development, A.I.D. provides support to U.S. cooperative development organizations (CDOs) to enable them to play an important role in the development of overseas cooperatives. A.I.D. enables CDOs to organize local cooperatives and credit unions, to strengthen cooperative federations, to train cooperative managers and technicians, and to encourage the use of cooperative structures in development projects. Cooperative development is accomplished through the following three distinct components. (1) Cooperative Program Support Grants strengthen and expand the CDOs' capability to conduct international operations. These grants receive funding from field Missions, other donors, and host governments, which provide the bulk of the resources for their specific international programs/projects. (2) Cooperative Initiative Grants encourages innovative programs, especially those which mobilize additional outside resources and bring new cooperative actors into the development process. (3) Management of the P.L. 480-related Farmer-to-Farmer Program and the Dairy Links Program provide short-term specialized technical assistance in agricultural production and marketing, development of nascent dairy industries, expansion of dairy product consumption in developing countries, and help to dispose of excess U.S. dairy products. In addition, the Cooperative Development Program continues to encourage and support the direct involvement and investment of U.S. cooperatives in overseas development activities.

Development Education

A competitive, cost-shared small grants program, the Development Education program was initiated in FY 1982 to increase the awareness of the American public of the social, political, technical, and economic factors pertaining to world hunger and to related development issues by supporting private and voluntary organizations in their efforts. The Development Education program is targeted to program initiatives that facilitate broad public participation and imaginative education approaches and that create outreach efforts directed to the media, educational associations, and other important influential groups.

Ocean Freight Reimbursement Program

A.I.D. supports the shipment of donated goods overseas by a variety of organizations/citizens. Private voluntary organizations (PVOs) collect donated equipment from U.S. firms and ship them to recipients in the less developed countries. PVO activities often require the input of commodities as an integral part of project implementation. Under this program, PVOs registered with A.I.D. compete for development assistance funds to support the shipment of goods overseas. This program ships equipment, supplies, and other donated resources such as tools to support village development projects and income-generating activities. The program also ships medical equipment and supplies to support primary health clinics' efforts to reach the rural poor and books and educational supplies to support primary school programs.
