INTRODUCTION

This volume represents a core list of medical and public health reference books, abstracts, and indexes. For this compilation, English-language books only have been included, with heavy American emphasis. Because scientific and technical information must be up-to-date, the primary criterion for inclusion is that the reference be a current source of information. Therefore, few titles published prior to 1965 have been included.

Given the vast amount of published material in the field of medicine and public health, items have been selected to reflect significant Egyptian health problems as well as to provide basic coverage of the field. According to studies<sup>1,2</sup> prepared for the Agency for International Development, Egypt is plagued by diseases and conditions affecting lesser developed countries as well as those of the industrial states. Health problems and conditions most acutely affecting the Egyptian health environment include endemic and infectious diseases, maternal and child health, overpopulation, respiratory and cardiovascular diseases, nutrition, and environmental health conditions. Because of diseases and problems attributed to environmental conditions, areas are covered in this volume which are normally the concern of microbiology and engineering. These include water supply and sanitation, sewage and waste systems, pollution, and other aspects of environmental health. Areas generally associated with public health and basic fields of medicine are also covered. These include hospitals and health management, health care delivery, preventive medicine, nursing, dentistry, cardiology, dermatology, and others. Mental health represents a relatively low place on the list of health problems and therefore was given minimal coverage. Veterinary medicine was excluded.

This list is divided into reference books and abstracting and indexing publications. When appropriate, reference books are divided by type of material, such as handbooks, dictionaries, encyclopedias, and textbooks. Reference books which are listed under the category "Books" are loosely defined as any book that is likely to be consulted for factual information more frequently than it will be picked up and read through in sequential order. Entries within each division or subdivision are arranged alphabetically by title. Book entries contain basic bibliographic information, while the secondary source entries contain annotative information about scope and coverage.

The most fundamental reference tools used for identifying reference books were the guides, bibliographies, and bibliographic essays to the literature. Such lists were particularly valuable in that they were compiled by science bibliographers, librarians with subject expertise, or other subject specialists within specific scientific disciplines. The most highly respected list consulted was the "Selected List of Books and Journals for the Small Medical Library," compiled by Alfred N. Brandon, former Librarian at the New York Academy of Medicine. This list, updated bi-annually, is comprised of 492 books and 138 journals which are intended as a guide or core list for small medical libraries. Items from this list are indicated in this volume by a single asterisk (*). Other reference sources used are listed below:

- "A bookshelf in public health, medical care, and allied fields."
August La Rocco and Barbara Jones.
Bulletin of the Medical Library Association 60:1:32-94
(January 1972).
- "A Library for Internists III: Recommended by the American College of Physicians."

- "A list of most frequently recommended medical textbooks."

59:4:589-598 (October 1971).
- "An integrated health-science core library for physicians, nurses and allied health practitioners in community hospitals."

(December 31, 1970).

Other sources used to supplement the above lists include Technical Book Review Index<sup>1</sup>, Reference Sources<sup>2</sup>, Medical Books in Print<sup>3</sup>, and the reference collection on public health at the U.S. National Library of Medicine. Items in the enclosed list which were not extracted from a published core list or evaluative reference tool are so indicated by double asterisks (**). We emphasize here that the goal of this and the other core lists is not to present a comprehensive, overall picture of scientific and technical literature. Rather, our goal is to provide a quantitative method whereby individual library collections can be checked against a reliable list generated from well-known sources of evaluative and/or descriptive bibliographic information. The coverage statistics which are observed will then be used as an input to determining costs for individual libraries to fill the gaps between what is relevant and held and what is relevant and not held.

INSTRUCTIONS

The purpose of this list is to help you assess the completeness of your reference collection. For each book and secondary source on the list, we need to know if the item is relevant (desireable) or not relevant (not desireable) to your collection or your library users' needs. If a title is relevant, please write the code "1" in the box adjacent to it if it is in your collection. Please write a "2" if the item is relevant, but is not in your collection. If the item is not relevant, please write the code "3" in the box adjacent to it.

to the field and in this I think that it achieves its purpose. For the student of biology with a general interest in cancer or a neophyte about to plunge into some highly specialised branch of cancer research. Pierce et al, will provide a useful reminder that there is more to cancer than molecules and also remind its readers that many of the findings of earlier workers are still relevant . . . Could be a useful book but it would be greatly improved by a more critical assessment of statements, definitions and references." (L. M. Franks).

"Fills a definite need in a developing field. It describes cancer care at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute at Houston . . . Will be most useful for the practising oncologist who wants to know how other centres are handling particular problems. For the practising internist, hematologist or surgeon who only occassionally has to deal with cancer patients the book may be of considerable value in updating his or her knowledge and may help in the management of day-to-day problems."
