Overview of U.S. Voluntary Agencies' Activities

The Agency for International Development (A.I.D.) recognizes the significant role that Private and Voluntary Organizations (PVOs) play in Third World relief and development. Although the PVOs registered with A.I.D. vary tremendously in size, scope, and capability, they share a strong commitment to improving the quality of life of people in less developed countries.

In recent years the hallmark of PVO efforts has been the shifting in emphasis from conducting short-range relief projects to planning and implementing long-term programs geared toward eliminating the underlying causes of world hunger and poverty. While continuing to be responsive to immediate human needs, particularly in emergency situations, many PVOs are now contributing their valuable resources to activities which A.I.D. considers crucial to improving conditions in the Third World: building institutions, transferring appropriate technology, and encouraging investment in private enterprise. These comprise the major principles upon which A.I.D.'s development assistance program is based and upon which A.I.D.'s partnership with PVOs is focused.

This partnership can take several forms. First, PVOs act as independent agents, conducting their own programs with A.I.D.'s support. They can also act as intermediaries for A.I.D., specifically where A.I.D. strategies and PVO project objectives coincide in developing countries. While each type of partnership is different, all joint A.I.D.-PVO projects recognize the independent, voluntary nature of PVOs. In line with recent Congressional legislation, beginning January 1, 1985, PVOs must obtain at least 20% of their annual financial resources for their international programs from non-U.S. Government sources in order to be eligible for grants available under A.I.D.'s PVO grant program.

Whatever the terms of the relationship, PVOs make an important contribution to the foreign assistance programs conducted by A.I.D. By joining forces and complementing each other's capabilities and scope, A.I.D. and PVOs can accomplish more than either could alone; A.I.D. is committed to strengthening that partnership. Recently, several policies have been initiated to increase the economic development impact of PVO programs supported by A.I.D.: increased emphasis will be placed on program integration and the focusing of resources on field programs;

the diverse natures and capabilities of PVOs will be taken into account in policy development and grantmaking; the PVO administrative relationship with A.I.D. will be simplified and standardized whenever possible; a central point of contact in A.I.D. for PVO information, coordination, and dissemination will be established in the Bureau for Food for Peace and Voluntary Assistance (FVA); and finally, PVOs should be given ample scope for independence in the actual design of project activities, bearing in mind that A.I.D. links the concepts of cost-sharing and program independence in its grant relationships with PVOs.

The following pages describe the general nature of the work being carried out by the PVOs which are registered with A.I.D. Included is such information as a PVO's geographic focus and sectoral concentration, as well as summaries of support, revenue, and expenditures. As of September 30, 1983 there were 167 PVOs registered with A.I.D. They reported receipts of $1,062 million in private contributions (cash, supplies, and equipment), and the U.S. Government provided them with a total of $731 million in the form of grants, contracts, U.S. government-owned excess property, ocean freight subsidies, and P.L. 480 donated food.

NOTE: These data represent the 12 month period of the fiscal year of the registered agencies and vary from agency to agency. The statistics contained in this statement are compiled from registered voluntary agency reports submitted as a requirement for continued registration. Data on income have been abstracted from the Statement of Support, Revenue and Expenditures (C-100), prepared by registered voluntary agencies which correspond to the individual agency's own fiscal year. "Donations of supplies and equipment" are those donations from private sources. Under "private contributions and other income" the other income may be derived from stocks, investments, direct bequests, interest on bank accounts, etc. The statistics on income from U.S. Government resources may vary from U.S. Government program statistics inasmuch as the voluntary agencies' fiscal reporting systems are not comparable to that of the U.S. Government.

Summary of Grants for PVOS

During 1982-83, the types of A.I.D. grant relationships available to U.S. PVOS from FVA/PVC and other A.I.D. bureaus, offices and Missions are described in the following. Registration with A.I.D. is a prerequisite for application for each.

Field Support for PVOS

With funding provided both through U.S.A.I.D. Missions and A.I.D./W regional bureaus, A.I.D. deals primarily with private and voluntary organizations at the country level through field support grants, a term which encompasses both operational program grants (OPGs) and co-financing program grants. In addition, there are two other modes which are occasionally used — contracts and cooperative agreements. The funding instrument chosen is determined by the intended relationship based on A.I.D.'s program objectives, not on the nature of the recipient (i.e. PVO).

Matching Grants

Matching grants are awarded to PVOS for a clearly conceived, evaluable, field-oriented program to be carried out in a number of countries, which is consistent with A.I.D.'s legislative mandate and supports a clearly defined, delineated program. Such a program may be as broad as the overall scope of the PVO's work or as specific as community-based health services or small enterprise development. The matching grant will normally allow a PVO to expand its program to new places and initiate new projects. Grants are awarded to PVOS with well-established development programs and with demonstrated private fund-raising ability. The grant may have a term of up to three years and is matching in the sense that A.I.D. will pay no more than 50% of the cost of the program. Through the Matching Grant, A.I.D. supports small enterprise development, local institution-building, and technology adaptation and transfer, directly and as they result from programs in agriculture and rural development, health, education and energy.

Institutional Grants

Funding of this type gives continuing support to PVOS who, in most cases, provide a unique development program overseas, but which, for one reason or another, are unable to raise enough money from the private sector to enable A.I.D. to discontinue broad support to their programs. For example, A.I.D. has provided assistance to the cooperative development organizations. The technical resources of these organizations enable them to play an important role in the development of LDC cooperatives by organizing local cooperatives and credit unions, strengthening cooperative federations, training cooperative managers and technicians, and encouraging the use of cooperative structures in development projects. These support grants also strengthen the ability of U.S. cooperatives to attract and channel additional bilateral, multilateral and cooperative development funding.

Development Education Program

A competitive, matching small grants program, initiated in FY 1982, to increase the awareness of the American public of the social, political, technical and economic factors pertaining to world hunger and related development issues by supporting private and voluntary organizations in their efforts. The Development Education Program is targeted to program initiatives which facilitate broad public participation and imaginative educational approaches and to creative outreach efforts directed to the media, educational associations and other important influence groups.

Other A.I.D. Relationships

Private and voluntary organizations carry out particular technical programs in fields of interest to A.I.D., such as family planning, health, energy and the like. For example, through the Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance, grants are provided to PVOS in support of disaster relief and rehabilitation activities. PVOS are also among the grantees under the American Schools and Hospitals Abroad Program. Consortia have proven to be effective vehicles for assistance to local projects in LDCs and A.I.D. supports PVO consortia in their efforts to promote coordinated planning for overseas development programs through the design, implementation and evaluation of small projects undertaken by member agencies on a cost-sharing basis. The Ocean Freight Reimbursement and Excess Property program reimburses PVOS for shipment of purchased or donated commodities used in their relief and development programs overseas.

Percentage of Funds Received from Non-U. S. Government Sources in Support of International Programs

The International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1981 amended Section 123(g) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 to establish a minimum non-U. S. Government (U.S.G.) funding requirement for the programs of U. S. Private and Voluntary Organizations (PVOs) funded from certain specified appropriation accounts. Stated simply, beginning January 1, 1985, PVOs must obtain at least 20 percent of their total funding for their international program from non-U.S.G. sources in order to qualify for grants available under the PVO grant program (i.e., matching, institution building, operational program and co-financing grants). These grants are used to support PVOs as independent entities in their own right. A.I.D. also deals with PVOs as intermediaries in conducting A.I.D.'s program. These forms of support, such as institutional support grants to the labor institutes, family planning agencies and cooperative development organizations, are excluded from the 20% non-U.S.G. funding requirements.

A calculation of each registered PVO's status vis-a-vis this 20% requirement will be made annually based on documentation submitted as part of the annual recertification process for registration with A.I.D. Listed below are the percentage calculations for each PVO, computed on the basis of the latest audited financial documentation submitted to A.I.D.
