The mission of the National Council for International Health is to improve health world-wide by strengthening the U.S. response to international health needs and by providing vigorous leadership to achieve this end.

NCIH is composed of more than 2,000 individual and 150 organizational members from both the public and private sectors. Its emphasis is on the health needs of developing countries. NCIH achieves its mission primarily by facilitating the individual and joint programs and actions of its members and by strengthening their capacities for service and cooperation.

INTRODUCTION

The National Council for International Health (NCIH) has published the 1988 Edition of this Directory as a service to the international health community. This book is a primary resource for those needing data on the many public and private U.S.-based organizations that are active in international health assistance. The directory lists over 300 agencies; they include civic groups, foundations, labor unions, private voluntary organizations, professional associations, consulting/small business firms, U.S. government agencies, and transnational corporations.

This 1988 edition of the directory is user friendly; it incorporates the suggestions made by past users and others we thought would find it useful in the future. The changes that resulted include a table to identify organizations by their activities and the countries in which they operate. For the first time, computer disk copies of the data bank are available for purchase.

We hope that this directory will be useful to those agencies and individuals engaged in international health assistance, and specifically that the information provided will reflect the changing needs of these readers and researchers.

NCIH would like to thank the many groups, organizations, associations, and institutions that cooperated in the development of this directory. Special appreciation must go to the NCIH Directory Committee. Dr. Antoinette Brown is thanked for designing and organizing both the directory survey and the computerized data bank. Special thanks go to Katherine F. Robbins and Rebecca Rosenfeld for their tireless aid and painstaking work in compiling the Directory information. Martin King, NCIH's Communications Director, oversaw the publication process and provided guidance. Above all, we would like to thank the hundreds of individuals in the public and private sector whose willingness to provide data made this directory a reality.

In short, we hope that our efforts in publishing this book will make your own efforts fruitful.

Dr. Russell E. Morgan, Jr.
Executive Director
National Council for International Health

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

1. Sources

The information contained in this directory has been derived from a questionnaire completed by each of the organizations listed about activities pertinent to the organization's international health activities. The organizations and countries in which they operate are shown in the tables on pages 1-1 to 1-12.

2. Table of Activities and Countries

Organizations are identified by primary activity and countries in which they are active, based on information provided by the organization. The organization is identified by its numerical order in the directory, rather than by an acronym.

3. Health Activities Classification System

This system was developed as a guide to assist organizations in identifying their various program activities. It forms the basis of the primary and secondary activities sections listed for each organization, when that information was provided on the questionnaire. The classification system is by no means exhaustive, and organizations have in some cases added other areas in which they are involved.

HEALTH ACTIVITIES CLASSIFICATION SYSTEM

A. Disaster Relief:

Disaster and emergency relief, aid to refugees, and health services for migrant populations.

B. Environmental Services:

Water and sanitation projects, potable water systems and latrine construction.

C. Health Education:

School health classes, community participation in basic hygiene and health care.

D. Health Planning/management:

Infrastructure support, health systems financing, data collection and analysis, project administration, information systems.

E. Hospital/health centers:

Clinics, dispensaries, leprosia, sanitarium, hospices, mobile health units.

F. Maternal and Child Health/well child:

Pre- and post-natal services, breastfeeding promotion, growth monitoring, immunization, oral rehydration therapy.

G. Medical Equipment/supplies:

Vaccines, hospital equipment, pharmaceuticals, diagnostic tests.

H. Nutrition Services:

Nutrition education, food supplements, targeted feeding programs, school lunches.

I. Population and Family Services:

Birth spacing counseling, contraceptive distribution, demographic research.

J. Primary Health Care:

Integrated basic health services.

K. Research:

Laboratory, clinical, and operations research.

L. Special Disease Initiatives:

Communicable diseases, STDs, tropical disease programs, infectious and parasitic diseases.

M. Training of Health Care Workers:

Doctors, nurses, midwives, dentists, health auxiliaries, laboratory technicians, primary health care workers.

AMERICAN BAPTIST CHURCHES INTERNATIONAL MINISTRIES
ABC/BIM

GOALS: Ours is basically a missionary-sending agency which exists to share the Christian faith in word and deed. In our view, essential to the Christian faith is its expression in meeting basic human needs. Thus in addition to work in religious mission in a narrower sense, ABC/BIM engages in a variety of services such as disaster relief, general public education, agriculture, delivery of health care services (hospitals and clinics and public health programs), training of health care workers, nutritional services, etc. However, we do not have our own organizations abroad but are in partnership with sister church communities to whom we relate.
