The 1994 Report of American Voluntary Agencies Engaged in Overseas Relief and Development lists private and voluntary organizations registered with USAID as of October 1, 1993.

Overview of U.S. Voluntary Agencies' Activities

The U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) recognizes the significant role that private voluntary organizations (PVOs) play in providing humanitarian and development assistance to the developing world. Although the PVOs registered with USAID vary markedly in size, scope, and capability, they share a strong commitment to improving the quality of life of people in developing countries.

PVOs' humanitarian activities originated more than a century ago in response to natural disasters. As a result of their ability to respond quickly and effectively, PVOs emerged as leaders in disaster relief. Gradually, their efforts broadened from emergency relief and food distribution to programs aimed at addressing the root causes of poverty and vulnerability to disasters.

This shift in emphasis from short-term relief to planning and implementing long-term development projects marked the beginning of the process of cooperation between USAID and the PVO community that has firmly taken root over the past 23 years. While continuing to respond to immediate human needs, particularly in emergency situations, PVOs have increasingly contributed their valuable resources to long-term development activities crucial to improving conditions in the developing world: promoting economic growth that is broad-based and sustainable and also ensures a safe environment; fostering human capacity development, particularly the attainment of health and educational levels required for all citizens to contribute to, and benefit from, economic development; and encouraging pluralism and democratic institutions.

These principles guide a variety of PVO activities in areas such as microenterprise development, environmental preservation, child survival, and democratic institution building. They are the foundation upon which USAID's development assistance program is based and upon which USAID's partnership with PVOs is focused.

In its work overseas, the PVO community demonstrates the traditional American values of pluralism, voluntary action, and concern for others. PVOs foster sustainable self-help efforts at the community level and provide a direct channel for people-to-people projects that broaden the participation of the poorest citizens in the social and economic decisions that affect their daily lives and ultimately influence the well-being of the nation as a whole. In recent years, the hallmark of PVO efforts has been their commitment to building the capacities of their indigenous partners in the field. More and more U.S. PVOs are offering training, technical assistance, and support to local affiliates and community organizations at the grass roots to strengthen the organizations' ability to carry out their own technically sound, effective development projects. This emphasis must continue during the 1990's if development is to be sustainable.

As we move further into this decade, USAID will be giving high priority to programs that address the following: the role of the informal sector, and microenterprises in particular, in building strong, free-market economies; the need to preserve the environment for future generations, while at the same time bringing about economic development and an equitable sharing of resources here and now; and the challenge to respond to fledgling democracies around the world while ensuring that the trend toward democratization is sustained.

PVOs have the skills and experience to contribute to each of these priorities in significant ways. Some specific opportunities for PVO programming in areas of interest to USAID include microenterprise credit and training projects; the use of debt for development exchanges; new initiatives to promote democratic pluralism, and the institute of civil society particularly in Eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union and elsewhere; and the use of program design techniques to ensure project sustainability.

USAID's support for PVOs has two major dimensions. First, PVOs act as independent agents, conducting their own programs, with USAID's financial and technical support to meet mutual goals. In other cases, PVOs act as intermediaries for USAID, specifically in countries where USAID strategies and PVO project objectives precisely coincide. In some areas of the world where USAID does not have resident staff, PVOs may be the sole implementors of USAID projects. While each type of partnership is different, all joint USAID/PVO projects recognize the independent, voluntary nature of PVOs. In line with Congressional legislation, all PVOs must be registered with USAID in order to be eligible for grants funded from development assistance funds, and all must obtain at least 20 percent of their annual financial resources for their international programs from non-U.S. Government sources.

By maintaining a central point of contact for PVO information, coordination, and dissemination through the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) of the Bureau for Humanitarian Response, USAID reinforces its relationship with PVOs. In coordination with regional and other bureaus within USAID, PVC carries out programs aimed at enhancing the impact of USAID/PVO cooperative efforts by strengthening PVOs' planning and management capabilities, allowing for more effective and sustainable programming at the local level.

Whatever the terms of the relationship, PVOs make a vital contribution to the foreign assistance programs conducted by USAID. As this report illustrates, the private resources devoted to international development by the private voluntary community far exceed their U.S. Government support. The private revenue PVOs are able to generate affords USAID a means of leveraging its own limited resources for development. By joining forces and complementing each other's capabilities and scope, USAID and PVOs can accomplish more together than either could alone.

The following pages present a current picture of the work being carried out by the PVOs that are registered with USAID. Included is information on the geographic and sectoral focus of each PVO, as well as summaries of support, revenue, and expenditures. As of October 1, 1993, there were 390 U.S. PVOs registered with USAID. PVOs required to submit support and revenue data received $2,392,983,057 in private contributions, and the U.S. Government provided them with an additional $1,511,762,405 in the form of grants, contracts, U.S. Government-owned excess property, ocean freight subsidies, and P.L. 480 donated food.

Who they are and what they do

The rules governing the registration of non-governmental, non-profit agencies engaged in voluntary foreign aid are promulgated in Part 203, Chapter II, Title 22, Code of Federal Regulations. Such aid includes projects and services of development, relief, and rehabilitation to needy nationals and refugees in health, education, welfare, agriculture, industry, emigration, and resettlement. The registry consists of the following agencies.

Registry of U.S. Voluntary Agencies

A Call To Serve International

ACTS

1180 Bryant Avenue
Mt. View, CA 94040
(408) 245-4905

Promotes peace and understanding through the exchange of ideas, information, and resources. ACTS has assembled local teams in five cities of the New Independent States, including Moscow and St. Petersburg, to develop a local leadership network of physicians, democratically-elected public officials, and non-profit organizations. These teams will implement and administer the management resource model: a systemic approach to problem solving—emphasizing learning, leadership skills, and building infrastructure. The model consists of five phases: apprenticeship, beginning involvement, self-direction, program expansion, and outreach partners. With the assistance of donated services, ACTS also coordinates the transportation of humanitarian aid and training of health-related personnel.

The Academy for Educational Development

AED

1255 23rd Street, N.W.
Washington, DC 20037
(202) 862-1904

Operates in over 100 countries, addressing human development needs through education, communication and information. The Academy achieves its goal with programs focussing in three major areas: Education and Exchange Services, Social Development, and Human Resources and Institutional Development. The Education and Exchange activities are designed to increase access to all levels of formal education and to improve the performance of educational systems. Higher education and technical training programs assist administrators in improving institutional management, enhancing the relevance of higher education to modern life, and creating leadership for developing societies. Social Development programs function outside formal education systems in providing knowledge and communication methods for health, nutrition, family planning, agriculture, and environment projects.

Accion International

AITEC

130 Prospect Street
Cambridge, MA 02139
(617) 492-4930

Sponsors self-help economic development programs to combat hunger, poverty, and unemployment in the Americas. Accion International's programs break the cycle of poverty and dependence by providing small loans at fair interest rates and by teaching basic business skills to the owners of small family businesses in low-income communities in Latin America and the United States.

Action Consulting Association

ACA

3527 South Utah Street
Arlington, VA 22206
(703) 379-9386

Provides management training and assistance programs to low-income entities in developing countries. These entities include small and micro-enterprises, village groups/co-ops engaged in economic activities, and indigenous PVOs. Emphasis is placed on the practical application of management skills such as bookkeeping, organization development and marketing. ACA's methodology includes: 1) development of management systems and training programs for specific economic activities; 2) training of trainers; 3) participative workshops; and 4) follow-up in the beneficiaries place of work. Part of the ACA strategy is to develop an autonomous, institutional capacity in each country to carry out the management assistance programs. This strategy has led to the development of ACA affiliated organizations in Senegal, Mali, Niger, and Togo, and pending organizations in Benin and Cameroon.

Adventist Development and Relief Agency International

ADRA

12501 Old Columbia Pike
Silver Spring, MD 20904-6600
(301) 680-6380

Works to improve the quality of life for the people in the poorest parts of the world. ADRA sponsors a wide range of activities including working on behalf of mothers and children, developing clean water resources, training people for self-sufficiency, improving agriculture techniques, promoting commodity-supported development, building and supplying clinics, hospitals, and schools. ADRA also responds to disasters throughout the world both natural disasters such as floods and hurricanes and man-made disasters such as wars that force refugees to flee from their home countries. Immediate aid is coupled with long-term rehabilitation projects that help communities get back on their feet. Food distribution is an important part of ADRA's program. Food is used to aid disaster victims as well as to provide an incentive to villagers working on community development projects. ADRA distributes an average of $125 million worth of food per year. ADRA's projects are based in more than 90 countries throughout Africa, Asia, Central and South America, the Middle East and the South Pacific.

Africa Rural Development, Inc.

ARD

24555 Southfield
Room 202
Southfield, MI 48075
(313) 569-4742

Provides a means to helping the rural poor assume responsibility to think, to plan, and to undertake their own development for their own benefit. The goals were formulated through working with and learning from rural communities in Africa during the last ten years. ARD's programs actively support and stimulate the community in their capacity to produce their own food. ARD works to reduce mortality/morbidity of children and women through the provision of community based health care and nutritional monitoring. They also focus on reducing the mortality/morbidity of children and women by supplying safe and adequate potable water for drinking and hygiene and also adequate sanitary services. The furnishing of health education and literacy improvement enables the practicing of correct and improved health and nutrition activities.

African Children Welfare Foundation

2630 South Manhattan Place
Suite 1
Los Angeles, CA 90018
(213) 735-6570

Attends to the spiritual, social, and physical needs of African children and their families. This humanitarian relief organization uses a staff of part-time and full-time volunteers, cooperating with other non-profit organizations and working with other relief agencies in Africa. African Children Welfare Foundation establishes clinic and feeding centers in rural areas, provides medical equipment and school supplies, and assists in the rehabilitation of handicapped children. The organization also engages in community development and responds to emergencies.

African Medical and Research Foundation, Inc.

AMREF

420 Lexington Avenue
Room 244
New York, NY 10170
(212) 986-1835

Provides assistance to governments, international agencies, and non-government organizations throughout East Africa in nearly 50 different health projects conducted in Kenya, Tanzania, and Uganda. Programs include: providing primary health care; training community health workers; training rural health staff through continuing education, teacher training, and correspondence courses; and developing, printing, and distributing training manuals, medical journals, and health education materials. In addition, AMREF applies behavioral and social sciences to health improvement, provides ground mobile health services for nomadic pastoralist, and provides airborne support for remote health facilities including surgical, medical, and public health services. Other AMREF activities include establishing medical radio communications, developing and planning health projects, and providing consultancy services.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church Service & Dev. Agency, Inc.

SADA

1134 11th Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001
(202) 371-8720

Sponsors development programs in the fields of education, agriculture, health care, and human services in western and southern Africa and the Caribbean. SADA became operational in 1987 with a child survival/immunization project in five rural Haitian communities with a target population of 100,000. The Haiti project is staffed by a team of doctors, nurses, and community health workers operating out of the Richard Allen Hilderbrand Clinic, owned and operated by the African Methodist Episcopal Church. In addition to providing immunizations against various diseases, SADA engages in oral rehydration therapy and other types of preventive health care.

African Wildlife Foundation

AWF

1717 Massachusetts Ave., NW
Suite 602
Washington, DC 20036
(202) 265-8394

Works to build the capacity of African countries to manage their natural resources. AWF's current program reflects a modern conservation agenda and includes six themes ranging from traditional to innovative: training and education, support of protected areas, conservation science research, critical species and habitats, policy and planning, and community conservation. Since its establishment in 1961, AWF has maintained a fully staffed technical and administrative office in Nairobi, Kenya. Projects are managed directly out of the Nairobi office, resulting in efficient and responsive management and enhanced opportunities for close working partnerships with African nationals and institutions. AWF is currently implementing 35 field-based projects, totaling over $4 million in 1992. These projects range from the very modest to the $2.5 million, multi-year Planning and Assessment for Wildlife Management project, funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The African-American Institute

AAI

833 United Nations Plaza
New York, NY 10017
(212) 949-5666

Encourages development in Africa by strengthening human resources and promotes mutual understanding between Americans and Africans. Educational programs include the African Training for Leadership and Advanced Skills program (ATLAS), the African Graduate Scholarship program (AFGRAD), the Southern African Training Program (SATP), and Partners for International Education and Training (PIET). A visiting fellows program was initiated in 1990. AAI works closely with the media, publishes the leading magazine on Africa, Africa Report, arranges visits for African leaders through the International Visitor program, and sponsors seminars and fact-finding missions to Africa for U.S. Representatives, Senators, and their advisors. Annual conferences address policy issues of concern to Africans and Americans. A constituency building program in six U.S. cities seeks to build advocates for Africa in the United States. In addition, AAI monitors elections throughout the continent.

African-American Labor Center

AALC

1400 K Street, NW
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20005
(202) 789-1020

Strengthens the ability of African trade unions to serve their membership and to participate in the development of their countries. Provides direct assistance to African trade unions in union development and leadership training, cooperatives and credit unions, health, trade, union research, communication, and other areas related to the welfare of workers. Promotes solidarity between African and American workers.

Africare

440 R Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001
(202) 462-3614

Works to develop water resources, increase food production, encourage environmental management practices, deliver basic health services, and provide emergency assistance to refugees and displaced people in rural Africa. Suite 200
Redlands, CA 92374
(909) 793-2627

Provides safe, dependable, cost-effective air transportation and related aviation services to relief and development agencies in remote areas of the world. Air Serv International, a non-profit, non-sectarian agency, supports programs that nurture self-reliance, build hope, and encourage initiative. Regular users include private voluntary organizations, the United Nations, and multilateral and government agencies. Air Serv International does not operate large aircraft, but specializes in single and twin-engine operations in remote or transport-deficient areas. Air Serv International aviation development activities assist developing countries in becoming self-reliant by initiating and sustaining local air transport operations. Since its beginning in 1985 through April 1992, Air Serv International flew over 78,000 flights carrying more than 58 million pounds of cargo and 221,000 passengers in Ethiopia, Mozambique, Sudan, Kenya, Somalia, Liberia, and Angola without any injuries or fatalities.

Aletheia Foundation, Inc.

2275 Westpark Court
Suite 201
Euless, TX 76040
(817) 267-3917

Promotes education and training for citizens of all ages in developing countries. Aletheia Foundation emphasizes developing appropriate educational and training curricula, methods, planning, teacher training, and administrative training. The purpose of Aletheia Foundation is to assist developing countries by raising literacy levels and by encouraging the life skills (agriculture, health care, economics) needed for a developing nation. The expected result is for the citizens of these developing countries to become a strong, productive, self-governing nation.

Alliance for Communities in Action

P. O. Box 30154
Bethesda, MD 20824
(301) 229-7707

Provides a range of development assistance to economically disadvantaged communities, nongovernmental organizations, and local groups in Bolivia and Nicaragua. It links these communities and groups with other more advanced groups, churches, municipalities, and neighborhoods, both locally and in the United States. The organization supports small businesses and cooperatives for increased income, efficiency, and quality of goods while raising the standard of living in the community. Alliance offers particular technical assistance with the appropriate technology to its programs and specific projects in housing, small-scale agriculture, microenterprise, potable water, and basic health services. The organization works with a core of volunteer professionals who provide the administration, technical assistance, and supervision.

American Association for International Aging, Inc.

AAIA

1836 Lomas Blvd NW
Albuquerque, NM 87131-6086
(505) 277-0911

Addresses population aging from a global perspective and participates in efforts for the aging in both developed and developing countries. AAIA focuses on projects that provide opportunities for the elderly to contribute to and benefit from social and economic participation in their communities and that identify and meet the needs of the elderly. Activities are focused on public education, technical assistance and training, and field project support. AAIA participates in a network of organizations that provide assistance to the elderly in developing countries, and with the network that works with retired Americans in the United States to provide education about humanitarian and development concerns in developing countries.

American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums

AAZPA

Oglebay Park
Wheeling, WV 26003-1698
(304) 242-2160

Represents 162 member zoological parks and aquariums and nearly 6,000 individual members to achieve its primary goal of wildlife conservation. Worldwide conservation efforts are supported through the association's extensive captive breeding, scientific, public education, and government affairs programs. AAZPA coordinates the Species Survival Plan (SSP), a cooperative conservation program for nearly 70 endangered species. The SSP is designed to aid field conservation efforts through captive breeding and reintroduction, field and laboratory research, and public education. The association also has an accreditation process and a code of professional ethics, which ensure that its member institutions maintain high standards of animal care and housing. Over 105 million people visit AAZPA-accredited institutions annually. AAZPA is an international leader in the zoological field, and its programs have been emulated worldwide.

American College of Nurse-Midwives

ACNM

Special Projects Section
1522 K Street, NW,
Suite 1000
Washington, DC 20005
(202) 289-4005

Provides support and technical assistance to programs that improve maternal and infant health. ACNM works in developing countries to initiate and evaluate training programs for traditional birth attendants, to assist schools of midwifery with curriculum development, to collaborate with midwifery associations in support of institutional development and continuing education, and to provide training to upgrade the skills of midwives practicing in both public and private sectors.

Center for Citizen Initiatives

CCI

3268 Sacramento Street
San Francisco, CA 94115
(415) 346-1875

Acts as a catalyst in non-official efforts to develop urgently needed programs and to oversee technical assistance for the New Independent States (NIS). The Center believes that ordinary citizens can address their own problems and implement needed changes. Therefore, the Center utilizes its network of NIS and U.S. citizens to solve the problems and develop the programs. The Center focuses its work in the areas of economic development, environmental protection, and sustainable agriculture. The economic development program places NIS participants in American enterprises to develop skills in micro-management, organizational development, marketing, and public relations. The environmental program supports non-governmental scientists and activists in their work for environmental protection by facilitating exchanges between American and NIS environmental experts, providing current information, technical assistance, and monitoring equipment and by developing coop strategies for solving problems. To address NIS' urgent need for food self-sufficiency, the Center's agricultural initiative focuses on mini-farming and urban agriculture.

Harry T. Fultz Albanian- American Educational Foundation

1716 Wilson Boulevard
Arlington, VA 22209
(703) 276-3000

Addresses the needs in Albania for technical and business skills initially through restructuring a prototype educational program for the secondary Technical School of Tirana (formerly an American vocational school) and establishing an associated Business Development Center. The aim of the Technical School is to train mid-level technicians and sub-engineers to be able to maintain the transport, mechanical, and electronic equipment necessary for the country's economic development and to familiarize them with the basic management practices required for launching new enterprises. The Business Development Center, a key component of the program, will assist with the school's workshops that offer repair services to the public in several technical areas, such as automotive, mechanical, or electrical repair, and aid graduates of the school seeking employment or business start-ups. The Center also aims to track economic activities as they develop and to offer information and continuing educational programs to the community at large. The combined efforts of the School and the Center should achieve a multiplier effect and lend support to Albania's fledgling market economy.

Health and Development International, Inc.

c/o Palmer & Dodge
One Beacon Street
Boston, MA 02108-3190
(617) 573-0100

Strives to improve world public health, with particular emphasis on the elimination of the guinea worm disease. HDI is undertaking to mobilize support for the termination effort by recruiting governments, corporations, international organizations, and private, non-governmental agencies which already work on water, agriculture, and health programs in the affected areas. In the absence of medical technology to fight the disease, HDI encourages water engineers, agronomists, and other non-medical people, through personal visits and discussions, to integrate a program against guinea worm disease into their existing work. Working with its branch in Norway, HDI staff traveled to different regions in Europe to attend conferences and increase interest and support for its programs.

Health Volunteers Overseas

HVO

1001 Connecticut Avenue, NW
Suite 725
Washington, DC 20036
(202) 296-0928

Provides expert training performed by qualified volunteers in a variety of health fields so that trainees can deliver services and train others in appropriate techniques. HVO is organized into divisions in the following specialties: anesthesia, dentistry, general surgery, oral and maxillofacial surgery, orthopaedics, and pediatrics. HVO operates programs in Africa, Asia, Central and South America, and the Caribbean. Volunteers work within the constraints of the local health care delivery system, teaching their colleagues effective ways to address the predominant pathologies and health problems found locally. While each program is different in goals and content, the principal concept remains the same -- that the volunteers should teach rather than just provide service.

HPI

1015 South Louisiana
P.O. Box 808
Little Rock, AR 72203
(501) 376-6836

Provides livestock and training to organized groups of small-scale farmers who request assistance. The basic unit of HPI is a community project consisting of three components: providing livestock and related supplies; coordinating training and extension work; and promoting organizational development, which includes planning, managing, record keeping, evaluating, and implementing the "passing on the gift" principle (distributing offspring and training to others in the community). HPI conducts programs in four geographic areas: Africa, Latin America/Caribbean, United States/Canada, and Central Eastern Europe. HPI is governed by a Board representing 14 denominational member agencies. Founded in 1944, HPI has worked in 110 countries and in 30 U.S. states. HPI has three learning and livestock center facilities and eight regional fund-raising offices in the United States where training, volunteer, and education programs are available.

Helen Keller International, Inc.

HKI

90 Washington Street
15th Floor
New York, NY 10006
(212) 943-0890

Works with and through other groups that provide services at the sub-national, national, and international levels to create sustainable and replicable programs. Founded in 1915 to develop rehabilitation programs for soldiers who were blinded during World War I, HKI's subsequent pioneering work in the areas of primary eye care and the prevention of blindness has made it an atypical private voluntary agency with a unique place in the public health community. HKI does not deliver direct clinical services to beneficiary populations. Instead, HKI acts in the roles of catalyst, trainer, organizer, networker, facilitator, provider of technical assistance and specialized human resources, and problem solver.

Opportunity International, Inc.

OI

360 West Butterfield Road
Suite 225
Elmhurst, IL 60126
(708) 279-9300

Creates microbanks in developing countries that provide small loans (averaging $1,000) to help people start or expand businesses and become self-sufficient. Opportunity International offers business training and on-site visits to improve the management skills of its borrowers. Simply put, Opportunity International offers capital rather than charity in 15 Asian and Latin American countries in order to create jobs. Since 1971, the purpose of Opportunity International has been to fight chronic hunger and poverty at the root cause — unemployment. People in developing countries do not have food because they do not have jobs. One family-supporting job is created with every $500 loaned. Opportunity International is dedicated to restoring dignity to the poor of developing countries by helping them to help themselves.

Population Services International

PSI

1120 19th Street, NW
Suite 600
Washington, DC 20036
(202) 785-0072

Provides health and population planning products and services in over 25 developing countries. PSI's activities include marketing health products such as contraceptives for birth spacing and family planning, condoms for STD and AIDS prevention, and oral rehydration salts to prevent infant death from diarrheal disease. PSI's programs involve information, education, and communication campaigns and brand specific promotion and advertising that motivates target groups to adopt healthier lifestyles and purchase and use specific products and services. PSI fosters local industry and service capabilities related to health and population, including market research, advertising, commercial distribution, and manufacturing. PSI also uses commercial marketing techniques and resources of the local private sector, such as distributors, retailers, and advertising agencies. PSI's products, however, are sold at lower prices, thus making them affordable to virtually all income groups. Revenue obtained from product sales is used to defray program costs.

(619) 279-9690

Works with communities worldwide to provide low-cost, sustainable basic health care programs directed at children and mothers. A private, non-sectarian, nonprofit organization established in 1961, PCI focuses on child survival interventions, family planning, AIDS education, direct medical assistance, and community health volunteer training. In all of its programs, PCI uses volunteers and prepares local communities to care for themselves through long-term, self-sustaining projects. PCI's OPTIONS Service links participating health care professionals with volunteer opportunities worldwide. PCI currently manages programs in the United States, Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Bolivia, Romania, Indonesia, and Papua New Guinea.

Project Dawn, Inc.

Donors and Workers Now

P.O. Box 60039
Savannah, GA 31420
(912) 920-3296

Organizes volunteer specialty medical teams who provide free medical assistance to the medically disadvantaged people of Guyana, South America. Provides the opportunity for more current and advanced medical care, which would not otherwise be available in the country. The teams give direct patient care through inpatient and outpatient services and provide consultations for more complicated cases, both in the clinic in Georgetown, Guyana, and in the outreach facilities. Team members provide an informal teaching program in the hospital and clinic settings, through direct one-on-one teaching and conferences, to benefit medical students and house officers. All equipment and supplies for treatment and surgeries have been donated, gathered, and shipped to Guyana through the efforts of Project Dawn. Staffed by unpaid volunteer personnel, the group sends medical teams of multispecialty physicians, surgeons, and support personnel to Guyana three to four times each year.

Project Mercy, Inc.

7011 Ardmore Avenue
Fort Wayne, IN 46809
(219) 747-2559

Provides assistance to refugees in Africa, supporting refugees' own initiatives and focusing on education for refugee children and adults. Project Mercy's programs provide material aid consisting of food, clothing, appropriate to the cultures and climate of Africa, and educational supplies. The clothing is sewn by volunteers across the United States in homes, civic clubs, church groups, and home economics classes. In 1992, Project Mercy began community development work in a rural village of central Ethiopia, addressing health, education, agriculture, and skills training.

Atlantic Center for the Environment

55 South Main Street
Ipswich, MA 01938
(508) 356-0038

Improves the quality of life and environment for rural people in northern New England and eastern Canada. The Atlantic Center for the Environment works at the community level to promote conservation and sound resource management practices through programs in leadership development, training, local institution building, and environmental education, research, and policy. The programs focus on rivers and watersheds, wildlife, natural areas, rural landscapes, and community development. The center's international programs strengthen emerging environmental non-governmental organizations and promote citizen involvement in environmental problem solving in target regions in the Western Hemisphere and in the Middle East. The center is part of Quebec-Labrador Foundation, a private, not-for-profit organization with funding from sources including the Rockefeller Brothers Fund and the German Marshall Fund of the United States.

RARE Center for Tropical Conservation

RARE

1529 Walnut Street
Philadelphia, PA 19102
(215) 568-0420

Ensures that endangered wildlife and its habitats are secured for future generations. RARE has developed a variety of innovative programs that complement the work of other organizations. These programs involve research, education, and habitat protection and are being implemented in different countries of the New World tropics. RARE concentrates on particular wildlife species because by emphasizing the needs of a notable species, the organization can galvanize local government and public support to protect the entire habitat upon which these species depend. Each of the programs is undertaken with the cooperation and participation of appropriate government and private organizations in the host countries.

The Resource Foundation, Inc.

TRF

Box 3006
Larchmont, NY 10538
(914) 834-5810

Helps strengthen the capacity of private development organizations in developing countries to assist low-income people in achieving greater self-reliance. TRF, a non-profit membership organization, was founded in 1987 by people united in the beliefs that local responses to need situations are more effective than expatriate ones and that local organizations often embrace key characteristics such as beneficiary participation, high-impact activities, self-help methodologies, and low-cost operations. TRF also believes that the role of agencies in the developed world is shifting from implementer to supporter and that the empowerment of agencies in the developing world is both inevitable and desirable. TRF provides a variety of services including networking, technical information, technical assistance, financial resource procurement, and representation. The current membership, comprising 25 groups located in 15 Latin American and Caribbean countries, is involved in a wide variety of high-impact projects, including primary health care, rural and urban development, the environment, microenterprise, and low-cost housing.

River Blindness Foundation

(617) 495-5527

Contributes to educational development and cultural exchange by placing volunteer teachers in underdeveloped countries. In China, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Namibia, Poland, South Africa, and Thailand, over 200 volunteers every year teach English, math, science, and sports to people in rural villages, quiet towns, and bustling cities. Teachers must possess a bachelor's degree and teaching or training experience. As volunteers, the teachers pay their own travel expenses. WorldTeach benefits everyone involved, providing education and development to needy countries, opportunities for volunteering and education about international development to Americans, and cultural exchange between Americans and people of other countries.

Young Men's Christian Association of the USA

YMCA

101 North Wacker Drive
Chicago, IL 60606
(312) 977-0031

Strengthens and assists local YMCAs in developing countries with the planning and funding of social and economic development programs. Works in collaboration with the World Alliance of YMCAs based in Geneva. The YMCAs of USA's International World Service Program assists programs in Central and Eastern Europe, Ireland, Africa, Latin America, Asia, the Middle East, the Caribbean, and the Pacific. The programs focus primarily on vocational training, project management training, health, rural community development, agriculture and family services. Additional assistance is given to YMCAs for work with refugees.

The private voluntary organizations (PVOs) presented in this report vary in size from several thousand dollars to several million dollars in support and revenue from private contributions, U.S. Government, international agencies, and in-kind donations.

Percentage of Funds Received From Non-U.S. Government Sources in Support of International Programs

For the past several years, the Foreign Assistance Appropriation Act has included the following provision regarding private voluntary organizations (PVOs):

None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act for development assistance may be made available to any United States private voluntary organization, except any cooperative development organization which obtains less than 20 percent of its total annual funding for international activities from sources other than the United States Government . . .

The twenty percent requirement does not apply to:

- Non-U.S. PVOs,
- Cooperative Development Organizations (CDO), or
- Economic Support Funds (ESF), Disaster Assistance, or other non-Development Assistance (DA) sources of funding.
