The 1996 Report of American Voluntary Agencies Engaged in Overseas Relief and Development lists private and voluntary organizations registered with USAID as of October 1, 1995.

Overview of U.S. Voluntary Agencies: A Strengthened Partnership with USAID

Introduction

This report presents a current picture of the work being carried out by 434 private voluntary organizations (PVOs) and cooperative development organizations (CDOs)* that were registered with the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) as of October 1, 1995. The report summarizes PVO program activities, including their geographic and sectoral focus, and their revenues and expenditures. New features of this year's edition include the names of executive contacts in each organization and their fax numbers and Internet addresses.

Voluntary Agencies: A Tradition of Support for Humanitarian and Development Assistance

USAID recognizes the significant role that PVOs play in providing humanitarian and development assistance to the developing world. Although the PVOs registered with USAID vary markedly in size, scope, and capability, they share a strong commitment to improving the quality of life for people in developing countries.

In its work overseas, the PVO community demonstrates the traditional American values of pluralism, voluntary action, and concern for others.

*CDO is included hereafter under the generic term PVO.

PVOs foster sustainable self-help efforts at the community level and provide a direct channel for people-to-people projects that broaden the participation of the poorest citizens in the social and economic decisions that affect their daily lives, and ultimately influence the well-being of nations as a whole.

The humanitarian activities of the PVOs originated more than a century ago in response to natural disasters. As a result of their ability to respond quickly and effectively, PVOs emerged as leaders in disaster relief. Gradually, their efforts broadened from relief and emergency food distribution to development programs designed to address the root causes of poverty and vulnerability to disasters. This transition from short-term relief to long-term development programs strengthened the cooperation between USAID and the PVO community that has firmly taken root over the past two decades.

While continuing to respond to human needs in emergency situations, PVOs have increasingly contributed their resources to sustainable development activities that are crucial to improving conditions and helping people in the developing world to improve their quality of life. Resources provided by PVOs promote economic growth that is broad-based and sustainable and ensures a safe environment. PVOs also foster human capacity development, particularly through the attainment of health and education levels required for all citizens to contribute to, and benefit from, economic development. The work of these voluntary agencies also encourages pluralism and the emergence of democratic institutions.

A Shared Basis for Collaboration

PVOs pursue their objectives through active involvement in areas such as micro-enterprise development, environmental protection, child survival and child welfare, family planning, democratic institution building, food security, and humanitarian assistance. These areas are also priorities for USAID's programs and serve as the foundation for its partnership with the PVOs.

Entering the second half of this decade, USAID continues to place emphasis on programs that build strong, free-market economies, address the role of the informal sector and foster the growth of micro-enterprises. Priority is also accorded to programs that protect the environment for future generations, while bringing about economic development and an equitable sharing of resources. USAID also encourages programs that help fledgling democracies around the world, while ensuring that the trend toward citizen involvement and democratization is sustained. In addition, new efforts that combine humanitarian and development assistance are becoming increasingly important in USAID's programs. Such efforts are preventing crises and bridging the continuum from short-term relief to longer-term development. PVOs have the skills and experience to contribute to each of these priorities in significant ways, including the development of innovative approaches to address emergency relief and development problems.

Recognizing the Voluntary, Independent Nature of PVOs

USAID views PVOs as its development and relief partners, both as intermediaries for USAID programs and as independent entities in their own right. USAID is committed to working with PVOs in both capacities. The Agency recognizes that by joining forces and complementing each other's capabilities and scope, USAID and PVOs can accomplish more together than either could alone.

One of the challenges inherent in such a partnership is the achievement of the right mixture of collaboration and independence between public and private spheres. A healthy degree of separation between the two is essential for the integrity of each, but cooperation is also critical to the vitality of both.

In keeping with this principle and the "privateness requirement" legislated by Congress, USAID requires that in order to be eligible for grants from development assistance funds, PVOs must register with USAID and show that at least 20 percent of their annual financial resources for their international programs come from non-U.S. Government sources.

Leveraging Private Resources for Development

PVOs make a vital contribution to USAID's foreign assistance programs. As data presented in this report indicate, the private resources devoted to international development by the PVO community exceed their U.S. Government support. For 1995, PVOs registered with USAID reported that they received $4,891,950,446 in private support. This represents 67% of their total resources of $7,321,890,560. USAID provided them with $1,441,498,560 while other U.S. government agencies and international organizations provided $988,441,554 to complete the remaining 33%. For a detailed breakdown of support and revenue sources, see the Summary of Activities and Privatness Percentages section.

New Policies and Simplified Procedures Strengthen USAID/PVO Collaboration

USAID has committed itself to a major, Agency-wide reform of its operating systems. This process of reengineering strives to improve development performance by emphasizing core values and simultaneously simplifying administrative procedures and eliminating unnecessary layers of bureaucracy. The Agency has adopted four core values: an emphasis on achieving results in all Agency activities; direct participation of and feedback from USAID's ultimate "customers," those citizens of developing countries who benefit from USAID's work; teamwork, including strengthened partnerships with PVOs and other development partners; and the empowerment of stakeholders, including greater accountability for the use of resources.

Consistent with these reengineering principles, a joint USAID/PVO Task Force produced a new USAID/PVO Partnership Policy Paper in 1995 that will reshape and strengthen USAID's longstanding partnership with the PVO community. This policy paper highlights the importance USAID places on consultation and dialogue with PVOs on a broad range of matters, from policy and program strategy to activity design. It reinforces the commitment by USAID and PVO partners to the promotion of broad based, equitable participation by host country organizations and peoples in the development process. In addition to a new emphasis on achieving results, it promotes more effective program integration of USAID funded PVO activities into USAID's strategic plans and objectives at the country level. Transparent, open communications between USAID and its PVO and CDO partners are also stressed in this new guidance. Results-oriented programs that involve cost-sharing, on a flexible and case-specific basis, are the anticipated outcome of a strengthened USAID/PVO partnership.

USAID's complex administrative procedures have tended to hinder the achievement of shared development objectives. Thus, over the past year, USAID has simplified procedures ranging from PVO registration to the negotiation of grant agreements to audits. The introduction of these changes will allow PVOs to focus on the achievement of development results rather than on the completion of unnecessary paperwork. For example, the Agency has cut by two-thirds the documents required for PVO registration. Simpler procedures have made it easier to obtain approval for overseas travel, and PVOs now have more latitude in the implementation of grants and cooperative agreements.

Building Local Capacity and Strengthening Civil Society

To more effectively pursue its sustainable development objectives, USAID is committed to strengthening the involvement of grassroots actors in the development process and to enhance the growth of civil society. USAID's "New Partnership Initiative" (NPI), announced by Vice President Gore at the 1995 World Summit for Social Development, is a direct outgrowth of the Administration's commitment to "putting people first." NPI stresses the role of non-governmental actors in organizing citizens for the pursuit of common goals and responsible civic action in partnership with local government. It highlights the importance of a deepening involvement of a broad range of stakeholders, particularly women, in these development processes.

Through NPI, USAID is able to combine its extensive grassroots development experience and recent management reforms with an expanded notion of development partnership. NPI emphasizes society-to-society linkages and strengthened partnership — both among local groups and with their regional or U.S. counterparts, and between USAID and a variety of developmental partners. Working closely with PVOs, USAID is operationalizing NPI's intent by strengthening and promoting increased collaboration among these local institutions, including indigenous non-governmental organizations, competitive small businesses, and democratic local governments.

NPI underlines the importance of the work U.S. PVOs have already initiated with their non-governmental organization partners overseas.

In recent years, the commitment of PVOs to building the capacities of their indigenous partners in the field has become a hallmark of many of their programs. U.S. PVOs are increasingly offering training, technical assistance, and support to local affiliates and community organizations at the grass-roots level to strengthen the organizations' ability to carry out their own technically sound, effective development activities. PVO programs that build capacity at the grass-roots level reflect the intent of NPI; so do programs that improve the enabling environment to ensure that local development initiatives are both permitted and encouraged.

USAID's Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation: A Central Contact Point for PVOs and CDOs

USAID's support to its U.S. PVO and CDO partners comes from many different sources in the Agency, including USAID Missions overseas and regional and central bureaus in Washington. The Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) of the Bureau for Humanitarian Response (BHR) has a special responsibility as a central point of contact for PVO information, coordination, and document dissemination. PVC is also responsible for registering U.S. PVOs and local voluntary organizations with USAID, and houses the secretariat of the Advisory Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid.

PVC, in coordination with regional and other bureaus within USAID, carries out programs designed to enhance the impact of USAID/PVO collaborative efforts by strengthening PVOs' planning, management and technical capabilities, allowing for more effective and sustainable programming at the local level. PVC provides this support through a number of grant programs, including matching grants, child survival grants, cooperative development and farmer-to-farmer program grants, development education, and the ocean freight reimbursement program.

Who they are and what they do

The rules governing the registration of non-governmental, non-profit agencies engaged in voluntary foreign aid are promulgated in Part 203, Chapter II, Title 22, Code of Federal Regulations. The registry consists of the following agencies.

TEL:(408) 395-0123
FAX:(408) 395-0123
E-Mail:fanramey@aol.com

Dr. Patricia Blair, President and BOD

Promotes peace and understanding through the exchange of ideas, information, and resources. ACTS has assembled local teams in five cities of the New Independent States, including Moscow and St. Petersburg, to develop a local leadership network of physicians, democratically-elected public officials, and non-profit organizations. These teams will implement and administer the management resource model, a systemic approach to problem-solving that emphasizes learning, leadership skills, and building infrastructure. The model consists of five phases: apprenticeship, beginning involvement, self-direction, program expansion, and outreach partners. With the assistance of donated services, ACTS also coordinates the transportation of humanitarian aid and the training of health-related personnel.

Chief Administration Officer

Strives to improve the quality of life of children within the context of family, community, and culture. CCF began in 1938 as a non-profit, non-political, and non-sectarian agency in China. Currently, CCF assists 2.5 million children mainly through more than 1,300 legally autonomous projects in over 30 countries around the world. Most projects improve the health and education of children, some indirectly through income-generating activities and community infrastructure. Total support and revenue for FY94 was over $112 million. Most of its funds come from private child sponsorships and contributions by individuals in the U.S. and ten other donor countries.

Develops employment and housing opportunities for persons with severe disabilities by utilizing rehabilitation technology, advocacy and training. COI was founded by people who saw the need for a contemporary corporation to explore innovative methods for supporting people with disabilities. COI focuses on family support, consumer empowerment and management training. The philosophical basis for these projects is that all persons, regardless of the severity of their disability are entitled to self determination; all persons can live in the community, and all persons who want to work should receive the support to do so.

Works to improve the quality of life in rural areas of developing countries by fostering the use of solar energy for rural electrification. Enersol's solar-based, rural electrification model makes solar electricity available and affordable to rural people by combining enterprise development and locally managed credit programs. Enersol fosters the establishment of local enterprises that sell, install, and maintain solar-electric systems. Enersol also helps local organizations establish credit funds to make solar-electric systems affordable for low-income families. In addition to operating field programs in Central America and the Caribbean, Enersol assists other initiatives throughout the world, provides specialized training and technical assistance services, and conducts research and educational activities.

Ms. Joan Holmes, President

Focuses exclusively on the human component of ending world hunger. The Global

Hunger Project is neither a relief nor a development organization; rather, it is a strategic organization that identifies what is missing in the global effort to end hunger and then sees that it is provided. Headquartered in New York, the Global Hunger Project has offices in 12 countries and volunteer activities in an additional 20. Its current programs include a participatory, multi-sectoral methodology program pioneered in India called Strategic Planning in Action, the Africa Prize for Leadership award project, the publication of "African Farmer" magazine, the global Youth Ending Hunger movement, and initiatives to encourage international agencies to work together as a common front to end hunger.

TEL:(501) 376-6836
FAX:(501) 376-8906

Ms. Jo Luck, Executive Director

Strives to help alleviate hunger and poverty, one grass roots community at a time. HPI has over 200 projects in 36 different countries, including the U.S., providing animals (including fish, bees, llamas, etc.), tree seedlings, and training in sustainable livestock management to organized groups of farmers who request assistance. Each recipient "passes on the gift" of animal offspring, seeds, or skills gained to another farmer in the community. The animals become an ongoing source of food or draft power, fertilizer and income, as well as an economic incentive to plant erosion-controlling trees and grasses. HPI conducts programs in five geographic areas: Africa/Near East, Asia/South Pacific, Latin America/Caribbean, United States/Canada, and Central/Eastern Europe.

ICA's philosophy is that the greatest collective resource in any community is its people. ICA's activities focus on participatory decision-making, human resource development, leadership skills development, multicultural diversity, and educational reform. With its international staff, ICA administers technical and leadership training, conducts social and scientific research, consults international organizations and foreign governments, instigates public discussion groups, and disseminates publications. For over 20 years, ICA has acted worldwide as a catalyst for positive change.

Mr. James H. Glazier, Sr., President

Focuses on promoting self-reliance through self-help projects in developing countries, including Chad, Kenya, Uganda, Thailand, Cambodia, Honduras, and the Philippines. These projects involve water resources, medical services, food/crop production, technology transfer, and education. International Christian Aid (ICA) supports three distinct but related programs: developmental aid, child sponsorship, and short-term emergency relief when necessary. ICA believes that children are the future — yet they are the most vulnerable to disease, hunger, and deprivation. ICA's Child Sponsorship program provides the child and his/her family with educational and health resources, as well as the necessary developmental programs to enhance the community in which the child will live and grow.

Dr. Janice Perlman, Executive Director

Transfers innovative solutions to problems common to the world's largest cities through its trans-national, non-profit network. The project follows a dual strategy: first, it spotlights workable local innovations and promotes their transfer among the cities, putting the lessons of practical experience in the hands of policymakers and the public; and second, it seeks to gain a deeper understanding of the process of innovation and the consequences for deliberate social change in cities. Mega-Cities promotes the transfer of solutions which are socially equitable, ecologically sustainable, politically participatory, and economically viable.

Creates non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in developing countries that provide small loans (averaging $500) to help people start or expand businesses and become self-sufficient. OPPORTUNITY International offers business training and on-site visits to improve the management skills of its borrowers. OPPORTUNITY International has been offering capital rather than charity in 21 Asian, Latin American, African, and Central European countries in order to create jobs since 1971. Its purpose has been to fight chronic hunger and poverty at their root cause: unemployment. OPPORTUNITY International creates one family-supporting job with every $470 loaned. It is dedicated to restoring dignity to the poor of developing countries by helping them to help themselves.

Mr. Russell R. Fletcher, Executive Director

Selects, trains, and supports indigenous community organizers working in twelve nations to facilitate the grass roots development of impoverished persons. This non-directive work is process rather than project oriented. People begin to address existing barriers to their development as persons of inherent worth and dignity. They themselves develop solutions, evaluate results, and reflect on their own feelings and involvement in problem solving. A community organizer typically works in one village for some five years, raising the level of consciousness of persons who had been excluded from the decisions affecting their lives. The result has been a transformation of the quality of life in whole communities, and spontaneous replication in neighboring areas.

Mr. Oliver Foot, President and Executive Director

Fights blindness worldwide through health education and hands-on training for health personnel. ORBIS has held over 250 training programs in 75 countries. Programs take place either inside the ORBIS aircraft, a DC-10 jet converted into a fully-equipped eye surgery hospital and educational facility, or in local hospitals. Visiting faculty members join ORBIS' 25-member international team to share skills with host-country colleagues. ORBIS builds the relationships started with the plane using an array of off-plane programs which help developing countries work towards becoming self-sufficient in the endeavor to eradicate unnecessary blindness. ORBIS gives diverse health care professionals from various backgrounds and cultures an opportunity to work in a spirit of peaceful cooperation.

Mr. Roger F. Pasquier, President

Ensures that endangered wildlife and its habitats are secured for future generations. RARE has developed a variety of innovative programs that complement the work of other organizations. These programs involve research, education, and habitat protection and are being implemented in different countries of the New World tropics. RARE concentrates on particular wildlife species because by emphasizing the needs of a notable species, the organization can galvanize local government and public support to protect the entire habitat upon which these species depend. Each of the programs is undertaken with the cooperation and participation of appropriate government and private organizations in the host countries.

Mr. John Moores, Chairman of the Board

Works to prevent blindness caused by onchocerciasis and seeks ultimately to eradicate this disease, which is endemic in Africa and Latin America. The major goals of RBF are to identify communities in which the risk of blindness is great, to find cost-effective and timely ways to deliver ivermectin to all eligible residents of these communities, and to prevent blindness resulting from onchocerciasis by the year 2000. RBF organizes treatment programs that include ivermectin distribution in areas where onchocerciasis is endemic and provides funding support for other agencies that conduct similar programs. RBF also sponsors educational activities that provide information concerning river blindness and ivermectin to those in widely affected areas.

Mr. Steve Kirk, Executive Director

Contributes to educational development and cultural exchange by placing volunteers to teach in developing countries. In China, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Namibia, Poland, South Africa, and Thailand, over 275 volunteers every year teach English, math, science, and environmental education to people in rural villages, quiet towns, and bustling cities. Teachers must have a bachelor's degree for most programs. As volunteers, the teachers pay or fundraise a fee to cover the cost of airfare, health insurance, field support, training, and administration. Deadlines for applications vary depending on the country. Volunteers are provided with housing and a modest stipend in most cases.

Mr. David Mercer, National Executive Director

Strengthens and assists local YMCAs in developing countries with the planning and funding of social and economic development programs. Works in collaboration with the World Alliance of YMCAs based in Geneva. The YMCAs of the USA's International World Service program assists programs in Central and Eastern Europe, Ireland, Africa, Latin America, Asia, the Middle East, the Caribbean, and the Pacific. The programs focus primarily on vocational training, project management training, health, rural community development, agriculture, and youth and family services. Additional assistance is given to YMCAs for work with refugees and disaster relief.

The private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) presented in this report vary in size from several thousand dollars to several million dollars in support and revenue from private contributions, U.S. Government, international agencies, and in-kind donations.

Summary of Activities and Privateness Percentages (1994)

For the past several years, the Foreign Assistance Appropriations Act has included the following provision regarding private and voluntary organizations (PVOs):

None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act for development assistance may be made available to any United States private voluntary organization, except any cooperative development organization which obtains less than 20 percent of its total annual funding for international activities from sources other than the United States Government.

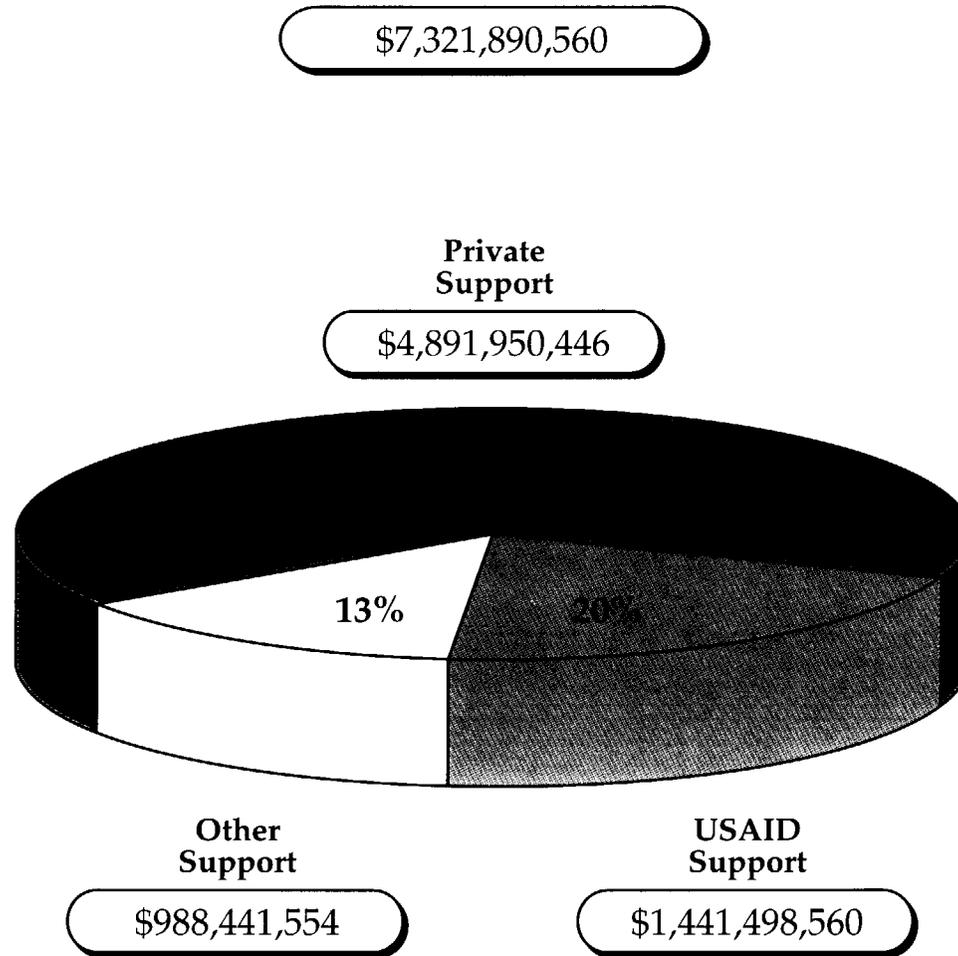

The twenty percent requirement does not apply to:

- Non-U.S. PVOs,
- Cooperative Development Organizations (CDO), or
- Economic Support Funds (ESF), Disaster Assistance, or other non-Development Assistance (DA) sources of funding.

CDO	Cooperative Development Organization
n/a	Newly registered PVOs are not required to submit USAID Form 1550-2 (Privateness Percentage Report) in 1994.
n/o	No overseas programs
