U.S. Voluntary Agencies: A Strengthened Partnership

Introduction

This report presents a current picture of the work being carried out by 425 private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) and cooperative development organizations (CDOs)* that were registered with the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) as of October 1, 1998. The report is an annual snapshot of PVO program activities, showing the geographical and sectorial focus of their activities, as well as their support, revenue, and expenditures. There are web page and e-mail listings in the Registry section and a brief selection of results from selected successful PVO activities.

Voluntary Agencies: A Tradition of Support for Humanitarian and Development Assistance

USAID recognizes the significant role that PVOs play in providing humanitarian and development assistance to the developing world. Although the PVOs registered with USAID vary markedly in size, scope, and capability, they share a strong commitment to improving the quality of life for people in developing countries. In its work overseas, the PVO community demonstrates the traditional American values of pluralism, voluntary action, and concern for others. PVOs foster sustainable self-help efforts at the community level and provide a direct channel for people-to-people programs that broaden the participation of the poorest citizens in the social and economic decisions that affect their daily lives and ultimately influence the well-being of nations.

The humanitarian activities of the PVOs originated more than a century ago in response to natural disasters. As a result of their ability to respond quickly and effectively, PVOs emerged as leaders in disaster relief. Gradually, their efforts broadened from relief and emergency food distribution to more sustainable development programs designed to address the root causes of poverty and vulnerability to disasters. This transition from short-term relief to long-term development programs strengthened the cooperation between USAID and the PVO community that has firmly taken root over the past two decades.

While continuing to respond to human needs in emergency situations, PVOs have increasingly contributed their resources to sustainable development activities that are crucial to helping people in the developing world improve their quality of life. Resources provided by PVOs promote economic growth that is broad-based and sustainable and ensures a safe environment. PVOs also foster human capacity development, particularly through the attainment of health and education levels required for all citizens to contribute to, and benefit from, economic development. The work of these voluntary agencies also encourages pluralism and the emergence of democratic institutions.

A Shared Basis for Collaboration

PVOs and USAID pursue common priorities that are aimed at achieving effective sustainable development. PVO objectives, while not identical with those of USAID, must be aligned with USAID's Strategic Framework, which lays out six broad goal areas: economic growth; population and health; democracy and governance; environmental protection; human capacity development; and humanitarian assistance. PVOs are actively involved in specific programs to meet these goals, in areas such as micro-enterprise development, child survival and health, natural resource management, civil society, capacity strengthening, food security, and humanitarian aid.

In the new millennium, USAID will continue to place emphasis on programs that build strong, free-market economies, address the role of the informal sector, promote health and well-being, and foster the growth of micro-enterprises. Emphasis will continue to be placed on programs that protect the environment for future generations, while bringing about economic development and an equitable sharing of resources. USAID also encourages programs that help fledgling democracies around the world, while facilitating the trend toward citizen involvement and democratization. In addition, efforts that combine humanitarian and development assistance have become increasingly important in USAID's programs. Such efforts are critical in efforts to mitigate crises and to bridge the continuum from short-term relief to longer-term development. PVOs have the skills, experience, and innovative approaches to address these challenges.

Recognizing the Voluntary, Autonomous Nature of PVOs

USAID views PVOs as its development and relief partners, both as intermediaries for USAID programs and as independent entities in their own right. USAID is committed to working with PVOs in both capacities. The Agency recognizes that by joining forces and complementing each other's capabilities and scope, USAID and PVOs can accomplish more together than either could alone.

One of the challenges inherent in such a partnership is the achievement of the right mixture of collaboration and independence between public and private spheres. A healthy degree of separation between the two is essential for the integrity of each, but cooperation is also critical to the vitality of both.

In keeping with this principle of autonomy and the "privateness requirement" legislated by Congress, USAID requires that in order to be eligible for grants from development assistance funds, PVOs must register with USAID and show that at least 20 percent of annual financial resources for their international programs come from non-U.S. Government sources.

Leveraging Private Resources for Development

PVOs make a vital contribution to USAID's foreign assistance programs. As data presented in this report indicate, the private resources devoted to international development by the PVO community exceed its U.S. Government support. For the 1999 Voluntary Agency Report, registered U.S. PVOs received annual private support worth $7.1 billion, more than 5 times the support received from USAID worth $1.3 billion. Other U.S. Government Agencies and international organizations provided an additional $1.1 billion to bring the total support and revenue to $9.5 billion. For a detailed breakdown of support and revenue sources, see the Summary of Activities and Privateness Percentages Section of this report.

New Policies and Simplified Procedures Strengthen USAID/PVO Collaboration

USAID has committed itself to a major, Agency-wide reform of its operating systems. This process of reengineering strives to improve development performance by emphasizing core values and simultaneously simplifying administrative procedures and eliminating unnecessary layers of bureaucracy. The Agency has adopted four core values: an emphasis on achieving results in all Agency activities; direct participation of and feedback from USAID's ultimate customers, those citizens of developing countries who benefit from USAID's work; teamwork, including strengthened partnerships with PVOs and other development partners; and the empowerment of stakeholders, including greater accountability for the use of resources.

In the past, USAID's complex administrative procedures tended to hinder the achievement of shared development objectives. During the past few years, USAID has simplified procedures ranging from PVO registration to grant competition and administration. The introduction of these and other ongoing changes will allow PVOs to focus on the achievement of development results rather than on the completion of unnecessary or unproductive paperwork.

For example, one very significant administrative procedure has been simplified. The USAID Handbooks have been replaced by a new Automated Directives System (ADS), available on-line at the USAID web-site, <http://www.info.usaid.gov>. Of particular interest to the PVO community is the ADS Chapter 303-Grants and Cooperative Agreements. After receiving specific and productive comments from the PVO community, the Agency revamped the ADS 303, effective May 25, 1998. Interested parties are encouraged to visit USAID's web-site for pertinent information when doing business with the Agency. In addition, simpler procedures have streamlined procedures for overseas travel, and USAID staff training is helping to ensure that PVOs have more latitude in the implementation of grants and cooperative agreements.

USAID's web-site at <http://www.info.usaid.gov> makes the Agency more accessible to its partners. The ADS, recent press releases, the USAID telephone directory, procurement information, and USAID's Yellow Book listing of USAID awards can be found at the web-site.

In the spring and summer of 1998, the Agency undertook a stocktaking of the way it does business under reengineering and managing for results. With a view toward achieving reforms for a more corporate culture, the aim was to find out which reforms were working and what USAID could do to enhance its progress. This culminated in the first worldwide Mission Director's Conference held in 30 years, which took place in November of 1998. USAID personnel, Congressional staff, staff from the Office of Management and Budget, and representatives from more than 25 partner organizations attended. USAID Administrator J. Brian Atwood convened the conference of USAID's overseas Mission Directors and senior Washington officials to discuss the conference theme "Leading Change." The conference was part of a continuing reengineering effort in USAID which began in 1994. Conference organizers identified three intended outcomes: 1) imparting a vision for USAID's future; 2) enhancing leadership, management, and communication related to organizational change; and 3) providing an opportunity for senior managers to participate actively in decision-making regarding key change areas.

Overall, PVOs and other partners participating in the stocktaking exercise were enthusiastic about the Agency's commitment to reengineering and the values and principles that it embodies. Nevertheless, concerns continue with regard to consistent application of reengineering principles by USAID staff. Partners advised USAID to deepen its consultation and dialogue with them. Partners want the Administrator and USAID's senior leadership to ensure that Agency staff has the skills, resources, and commitment to make reengineering work for everyone. They stressed the need for a procurement process that is more responsive, accessible, and sensitive to institutional differences among the partners. They also strongly advised USAID to develop a more appropriate, flexible, and less burdensome approach to defining, measuring, and reporting program performance.

USAID will take steps to enhance partner participation in strategic planning in the field and in Washington, provide managing for results training, and streamline results reporting.

USAID's Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation: A Central Contact Point for PVOs and CDOs

USAID's support to its U.S. PVO and CDO partners comes from many different sources in the Agency, including USAID Missions overseas and regional and central bureaus in Washington. The Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) in the Bureau for Humanitarian Response (BHR) has special responsibility as the central point of contact for PVOs, and for information, coordination, and document dissemination. PVC is responsible for the registration of U.S. and non-U.S. PVOs with USAID. PVC also administers PVO set-aside grant programs and houses the secretariat of the Advisory Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid.

PVC, in coordination with missions, regional offices, and other bureaus within USAID, carries out programs designed to enhance the impact of USAID/PVO collaborative efforts by strengthening PVOs' planning, management, and technical capabilities, allowing for more effective and sustainable programming at the local level. PVC provides this capacity building support through a number of competitive grant programs, including matching grant, child survival, cooperative development, farmer-to-farmer, development education, and the ocean freight reimbursement programs.

This document, commonly referred to as the VolAg Report, is the culmination of a year's worth of effort by PVC to collect, validate, and disseminate a clear and factual report about the PVO community.

Registry of U.S. Voluntary Agencies

Who they are and what they do

The rules governing the registration of nongovernmental, non-profit agencies engaged in voluntary foreign aid are promulgated in Part 203, Chapter II, Title 22, Code of Federal Regulations. The Registry consists of the following agencies.

A Call To Serve International

ACTS

1504 East Broadway, Suite 206
Columbia, MO 65201
TEL: (573) 449-3146
FAX: (573) 874-5820
EMAIL: actsg@actsg.org

Dr. Patricia Blair, President

Promotes peace and understanding through institutional and individual capacity-building using exchange of ideas, information, and resources. ACTS has established ACTS chapters with local leadership in the NIS. ACTS-Georgia has a countrywide distribution and monitoring network for medication, medical supplies, medical and dental equipment, and an annual youth diabetic program and summer camp. Diabetic care, emergency and disaster medicine, and women's and children's health are priorities. Sister city links between Columbia, Missouri and Kutaisi, Georgia focus on public administration, business, education, health, as well as art and culture. In addition, sister university connection links The University of Missouri with the two universities in Kutaisi.

Provides governments with technical assistance in the areas of housing, employment, and education for persons with disabilities. COI was founded by people who saw the need for a contemporary corporation to explore innovative methods for supporting people with disabilities. The development of employment and housing opportunities for persons with disabilities is done through the utilization of rehabilitation technology, advocacy, and training. COI focuses on family support, consumer empowerment, and management training. The philosophical basis for these projects is that all persons, regardless of the severity of their disability, are entitled to self-determination. All persons can live in the community, and all persons who want to work should receive the support to do so.

Targets business development services to large groups of small-scale producers in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. With local and international partners, EWW develops business plans for basic industries that transform the economies and livelihoods of small-scale and micro-entrepreneurs. EWW programs use a business-like approach to enterprise creation and development based on the "value chain," the steps of production, processing, and marketing along which value is added to products. By helping small producers obtain the expert advice, value-adding technologies, and access to credit already enjoyed by their larger competitors, EWW programs level the playing field and enable small-scale and micro-entrepreneurs to develop their own competitive business advantage.

Heals human hurts through relief and development programs. A necessary condition for development is to initially address the emergency needs of the hurting families and then to provide the technical assistance, training, and other material resources needed to help them develop sustainable, income-generating skills as relief needs abate. FMPI provides food, medical supplies, and emergency relief services to people suffering as a result of severe drought, flooding, famine, or natural disaster in the Philippines, Africa, and Central America. FMPI builds, operates, and supports child survival centers, schools, orphanages, and medical clinics. FMPI operates 60 food projects and a food cooperative volunteer program which addresses the rural hunger needs of Native Americans.

Mr. Richard P. Taylor, President and Executive Director

Serves the poor of Haiti and Over-the-Rhine section of Cincinnati, Ohio by offering programs aimed at the needs of specifically targeted people groups. In Haiti, emphasis is on the needs in remote, rural, agricultural areas where education of elementary children is provided through a child sponsorship program. FOCAS supplies teachers, books, school supplies, uniforms, medical examinations, and hot lunches. Emergency feeding is activated as needed and as funds are available. A USAID-sponsored Child Survival Mentoring Partnership Project was initiated in 1997. Andean Rural Health Care serves as mentor to FOCAS utilizing their census-based impact oriented methodology developed and proven in Bolivia.

Dr. Christopher Dunford, President

Develops innovative programs for eliminating chronic hunger by providing resources and information that empower families and communities to help themselves. To help the rural hungry in developing countries make choices that will move them beyond hunger, Freedom from Hunger supports programs that provide very poor women with cash credit through village banking for income-generating activities that are linked to participatory adult education. These "Credit with Education" programs, in turn, result in an overall improvement in health and nutrition, family planning, food production and storage, and better management of small businesses. Technical and financial support is provided to local organizations to help them develop and expand programs.

Dr. Daniel J. Aulicino, Chair

Works to restore respect for humanity worldwide, irrespective of race, color, creed, nationality, sex, age, ethnic, religious, or political affiliation for individuals who are in dire need of basic necessities of life, or who are being deprived of fundamental human rights as defined in the U.N. Charter. To achieve this goal, HI has launched: Operation CURE (Comprehensive Urban Revitalization Enterprise) America, within the U.S. and Operation Save Humanity internationally. As part of Operation Save Humanity, HI is trying to help land mine victims and is developing an automated International Diversified Bone Marrow Registry (IDBMR). HI also crusades for runaway children and to prevent suicide of children and elderly people by establishing a toll-free hotline/lifeline.

Applies a flexible, multi-sectoral, decentralized, people-centered methodology known as Strategic Planning-in-Action (SPIA). A global strategic organization committed to the sustainable end of world hunger, The Hunger Project carries out a two-prong strategy: mobilizing grassroots people for self-reliant action, and mobilizing committed leadership so that self-reliant action can succeed. Its highest priority is confronting and transforming the subjugation of women as a key step to ending hunger. In addition to SPIA activities in nine countries in Asia, Africa, and Latin America, The Hunger Project annually awards the Africa Prize for Leadership for the Sustainable End of Hunger.

Mr. Russell R. Fletcher, Executive Director

Selects, trains, and supports indigenous community organizers working in ten nations to facilitate the grassroots development of impoverished persons. This non-directive work is process-rather than project-oriented. People begin to address existing barriers to their development as persons of inherent worth and dignity. They develop their own solutions, evaluate results, and reflect upon the process and the outcome. A community organizer typically works in one village for approximately five years, raising the level of consciousness of persons who have been excluded from decisions that affect their lives, which results in a transformation of the quality of life in whole communities and spontaneous replication in neighboring areas.

Engages in international development and technical training. Founded in 1964 as the people-to-people component of the Alliance for Progress, each of Partners's 60 partnerships link a state or region of the U.S. with a Latin American or Caribbean area and represents an indigenous bilateral organization. For example, Peru is partnered with Texas and Paraguay with Kansas. Professionals on each side of a partnership work together to carry out a wide variety of projects, including activities that enhance the quality of life for women and their families, provide income generating opportunities to young people, promote the involvement of private citizens in local governance, and strengthen the ability of local organizations to protect the environment.

Mr. Peter Hazlewood, President

Ensures that endangered wildlife and its habitats are secured for future generations. RARE has developed a variety of innovative programs that complement the work of other organizations. These programs involve research, education, and habitat protection and are being implemented in Latin America, the Caribbean, and the Pacific. RARE concentrates on particular wildlife species because emphasizing the needs of a notable species allows the organization to galvanize local government and public support to protect the entire habitat upon which these species depend. Each of the programs is undertaken with the cooperation and participation of appropriate government and private organizations in the host countries.

Ms. Suzan Habachy, Executive Director

Provides business training material, psychological encouragement, and conditional seed capital of $100 to help families or groups of very poor, unemployed, or underemployed people to start or expand micro-enterprises. Trickle Up's micro-enterprise program is implemented on a voluntary basis by local partners, or coordinating agencies—mainly indigenous, nongovernmental organizations engaged in development work. The agencies identify grantees, disburse the capital, and offer business guidance and support. Since 1979, Trickle Up has created opportunities for more than 350,000 entrepreneurs in Asia, Africa, the Americas (including the U.S.), and Europe. In 1997, Trickle Up helped start 7,755 micro-entrepreneurs in 51 countries.

Ms. Jodi Hullinger, Acting Executive Director

Contributes to educational development and cultural exchange by placing volunteers to teach in developing countries. In China, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Lithuania, Namibia, Poland, South Africa, and Thailand, over 275 volunteers every year teach English, math, science, and environmental education to people in rural villages, quiet towns, and bustling cities. Teachers must have a bachelor's degree for most programs. As volunteers, the teachers pay or raise funds to cover the cost of airfare, health insurance, field support, training, and administration. Deadlines for applications vary. Volunteers are provided with housing and a modest stipend in most cases.

Mr. William G. Barndt, President

Provides clothing, medicine and medical supplies, and other necessary humanitarian aid for needy persons around the world. Since 1992, mostly with funds from the Macedonian Ministry of Health, 25 containers, largely of hospital equipment and medical supplies, have been sent to hospitals and to CARITAS in Macedonia. Through Pastors for Peace, shipments of computers, medical supplies, and miscellaneous aid items have been shipped to URACCAN University on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, and to clinics or hospitals in Bluefields, Nicaragua; Soyapango, El Salvador; and Palenque, Chiapas, Mexico.

Summary of Activities and Privateness Percentages (1997)

The private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) presented in this report vary in size from several thousand dollars to several million dollars in support and revenue from private contributions, U.S. Government, international agencies, and in-kind donations.

For the past several years, the Foreign Assistance Appropriations Act has included the following provision regarding PVOs:

None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act for development assistance may be made available to any United States private and voluntary organization, except any cooperative development organization which obtains less than 20 percent of its total annual funding for international activities from sources other than the United States Government.*

The twenty percent requirement does not apply to:

- ~ Non-U.S. PVOs,
- ~ Cooperative Development Organizations (CDO), or
- ~ Economic Support Funds (ESF), Disaster Assistance, or other non-Development Assistance (DA) sources of funding.

CDO Cooperative Development Organization

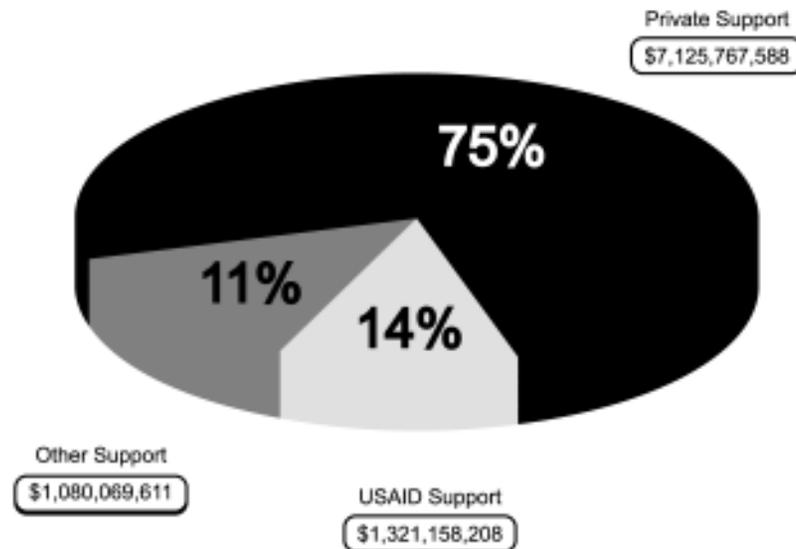

n/o No overseas programs

*The Privateness Percentage computation is based on overseas expenses reported by the PVO on its financial statements. This percentage excludes expenses for USAID-initiated activities.

Success Stories of U.S. Voluntary Agencies

This section is a random sampling of success stories reported by PVOs with support from the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (BHR/PVC). These success stories are illustrative of USAID's many partners and reflect the diversity of efforts conducted in developing countries.

ACDI/VOCA

-NIS-

Access to credit is a major constraint for private farmers in the NIS countries. In Georgia, Farmer-to-Farmer volunteers developed a system of agricultural credit cooperatives. In two years, the pilot effort was expanded and now consists of three credit cooperatives and a central administrative organization. In 1997, 16 loans were made by one credit cooperative, and it had a 96 percent repayment rate in 1998. In 1998, a total of $350,000 was provided to three credit cooperatives - Gori, Kobouleti, and Telavi, Georgia. They made 56 separate loans to private producers for input supplies. The most successful, Telavi, experienced a 35 percent increase in land use and a rise of 93 percent in employment for agriculture. Capitalization for the credit cooperatives is expanding and an estimated $530,000 is planned to meet the 1999 loan demand.

Cooperative Housing Foundation

(CHF)

-South Africa-

Since June 1996, Cooperative Housing Foundation (CHF) has operated a Technical Service Center (TSC) in Port Elizabeth which assists low-income families in accessing a national governmental housing subsidy and provides the necessary bridge financing for home delivery. Much of the historically disadvantaged population in South Africa lives in inadequate housing conditions and does not have linkages to water and sewer lines. This program initially focuses on social preparation and assists communities in forming democratically managed homeowner associations. These groups oversee the home construction phase which trains and employs local labor. Just over two years into the program, CHF has made many positive impacts including: building 783 homes; mobilizing $1.9 million in national housing subsidies; training 200 local men and women in home construction; and injecting over $100,000 in wages into the local economy.

Cooperative for Assistance and Relief Everywhere, Inc.

(CARE)

-Kenya-

Joining in the fight to bring primary health care to the people of Siaya, Kenya is one of Cooperative for Assistance and Relief Everywhere's (CARE) most successful projects. The Community Initiatives of Child Survival in Siaya (CICSS) project teaches people how to quickly diagnose and treat childhood illnesses and thus prevent them from evolving into life threatening diseases. CICSS has become a model of health care programming. CICSS is improving the health of 32,674 children under the age of five, and 41,672 mothers in 320 rural villages by creating local health committees and training their members to be health workers. These committees work with women's groups to improve the health of babies, toddlers, and mothers. In addition, the project establishes community pharmacies to give parents access to the medicines needed to treat common illnesses. CICSS has made it possible for a child born into poverty in Siaya to overcome the odds. Preliminary reports indicate as much as a 60 percent decline in infant and child mortality.

International Development Enterprises

(IDE)

-India-

In Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra, Rajasthan, and Karnataka India, International Development Enterprises (IDE) is developing low cost drip and sprinkler micro-irrigation "kits" (a kitchen garden kit fed by a bucket, a larger kit fed by a drum, and a gravity-fed system for terraces) that will be mass-marketed through 50 village dealers and 20 local NGOs, who generate local income from sales. At the end of three years, the program will have disseminated 10,000 kits (25 square meters to quarter acre) and custom systems (up to one acre) to 10,000 small farm families. Drip irrigation can achieve a 30 percent increase in yield while saving 50 percent on water, with reduced needs for fertilizer and labor. This program is a springboard for a worldwide dissemination of both the technology in areas of water scarcity, and the methodology to other international and local NGOs.

National Cooperative Business Association

(NCBA)

-El Salvador-

The National Cooperative Business Association (NCBA) has helped 133,000 members of 52 Salvadoran cooperative and producer groups to rebuild the war ravaged economy of El Salvador by developing new sources of income through the cultivation of non-traditional crops for export to the United States and other countries including organic coffee, sesame, cashews, melons, marigolds, and a range of fresh fruits and vegetables. These cooperatives account for two-thirds of El Salvador's non-traditional produce exports and have generated tens of thousands of jobs. During the years of civil strife, the coffee plants of La Providencia went untended. Because no chemical fertilizers or pesticides were applied to the coffee trees during those years, the cooperative was able to have the coffee crop certified chemical-free and accepted by commercial organic markets with assistance from NCBA. In 1993, La Providencia Cooperative won El Salvador's National Ecology Award for reversing environmental decline through organic production.

Project Concern International

(PCI)

-U.S./Worldwide-

Project Concern International (PCI), in partnership with the American Medical Student Association (AMSA), is educating students and practicing health professionals about specific links between international health development and domestic health concerns. The project also encourages an increased health focus in U.S. medical schools. PCI and AMSA's 1996 Development Education project (Global-Local Health Links 1996) introduced current and future physicians to these issues, reached new audiences in other health care disciplines, and provided medical students with strategies for generating more focus on international health issues in U.S. medical schools. Written communications, student action kits, interactive media, seminars, and print and broadcast media were used to reach the target audience. The project increased the number of students and physician mentors applicants in the MedSERVE program by 10 percent (a cooperative program among the partners that offers students overseas volunteering opportunities).
