THE AMERICAN COUNCIL OF VOLUNTARY AGENCIES FOR FOREIGN SERVICE was established in 1943 to provide a means for consultation, coordination and planning, and to assure the maximum effective use of contributions by the American community for the assistance of people overseas. Through the Council, 44 member American voluntary agencies engaged in programs of active service overseas now coordinate their plans and activities both at home and abroad, not only among themselves but also with non-member agencies and governmental, intergovernmental and international organizations. Since 1955 the Council has operated the Technical Assistance Information Clearing House under contract with the United States Agency for International Development.

THE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE INFORMATION CLEARING HOUSE serves as a center of information on the socio-economic development programs abroad of U.S. non-profit organizations. Through publications and the maintenance of an inquiry service, it makes available to organizations, the government, researchers, and other users information about development assistance with particular reference to the resources and concerns of the private, voluntary non-profit sector.

THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON VOLUNTARY FOREIGN AID was established in 1946 by Presidential Directive "to tie together the governmental and private programs in the field of foreign relief and to work with interested agencies and groups." The purpose of the Committee is to guide the public and the agencies seeking the support of the public, in the appropriate and productive use of voluntary contributions for foreign aid. The Advisory Committee, made up of private citizens who serve without compensation, is in the Agency for International Development (AID); the Secretariat is located in AID's Voluntary Foreign Aid Service. Agencies registered with the Advisory Committee are eligible for certain benefits, including government grants of agricultural commodities under PL 480 legislation; reimbursement by the Government for the overseas shipment of these foods and their own donated supplies; and various kinds of property that are excess to government needs.

Introduction

This is the sixth in a series of reports issued since October 1965 by the Technical Assistance Information Clearing House describing all known programs of assistance in South Vietnam that are operated and supported currently by US nonprofit organizations.

The majority of the organizations listed are voluntary agencies. Missions, foundations and other nonprofit, nongovernmental organizations have been included in order to present a comprehensive picture of the range and extent of US private effort to provide the Vietnamese people with relief, material aid, and technical assistance in medicine, education, agriculture, community development, and social service.

The report is divided into two parts. Part 1 describes 25 programs employing, in Vietnam, over 300 US personnel, 75 international, and 500 Vietnamese. US nonprofit organizations, based in the United States, are administratively and financially responsible for these programs. The report does not reflect the participation of many other organizations, individuals and institutions who, as members and constituents of the administering agencies, channel their financial and material contributions to Vietnam through them.

Although the major emphasis of these programs, at this time, is on providing relief and material aid to refugees and relocated villagers -- more than $14.5 million worth of donated food, clothing, and medical supplies was shipped last year -- the agencies allocated over $4.5 million last year and have budgeted about $7.3 million for the current year to operate many other types of programs. (The figures are approximate owing to differences in fiscal years and in methods of financial reporting.) These include the operation of various medical facilities and provision of medical personnel to local hospitals and dispensaries; educational programs including vocational training, agricultural extension work, school construction, and training programs for teachers, social workers, and medical assistants; the development of rural cooperatives; child-welfare activities including day-care centers, orphanages, medical assistance and immunization programs, school-lunch and other supplementary feeding programs; and various self-help endeavors in construction, development of community facilities, and fostering of local industries and agriculture.

The 22 organizations mentioned in part 2, under Programs of Support, include those US nonprofit organizations that are providing aid to Vietnamese institutions; contributing to programs in Vietnam operated by other US organizations; contributing to programs operated by international organizations of which they are a branch; or providing training in the US to either Vietnamese or to international personnel who will be serving in Vietnam (US college and university student-exchange or scholarship programs have not been included). They have neither US personnel in South Vietnam nor are they administratively responsible for a program there. Their total contribution, both financial and in material aid, exceeded $8.5 million.

The data for this report has been submitted by the organizations within the last month and reflects the most recent information available. Subsequent reports will cover changes in the size, scope, and number of programs, and will include new organizations and programs as they come to our attention.
