To increase the ability of low-income farmers (especially women) in Africa and Latin America to effectively manage their natural resources to meet immediate needs for food, fiber, and fuel while enhancing future resource productivity. Overall, RI's strategy is to develop Regenerative Agriculture Research Centers (RARC) that work with men and women farmers, government organizations, and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to improve their capacity to integrate natural resource management concepts into food and fiber production systems. RARCs engender long-term sustainability of this process by building networks of farmers, researchers, NGOs, and government organizations.

To implement the concept of household livelihood security. Specifically, the project assists four country offices to improve (1) targeting of beneficiaries; (2) choice of multisectoral interventions; (3) design or redesign of projects; and (4) monitoring and evaluation of household impact to increase these CARE country programs' ability to analyze household livelihood security and move projects to best practices. The project also aims to build these CARE country offices' ability to partner with local organizations and expand their capacity to deliver services efficiently, effectively, and sustainably. Lessons learned will be disseminated to CARE country offices and other development partners (private and voluntary organizations, non-governmental organizations, and the U.S. Agency for International Development).

To expand CARE's current work in child survival in the Sylhet District. Key interventions include immunization, family planning, diarrheal disease control, Vitamin A provision, and HIV/AIDs support. In Kenya, CARE is building on a successful ongoing health education, water, and sanitation project. CARE will promote control of malaria, pneumonia, diarrheal disease, and HIV/AIDs as well as improve immunization and family planning coverage. In Niger, CARE is implementing a child survival project in the Merriah, Matameye, and Magaria districts of the Zinder Department. Key interventions include expanded program of immunizations, nutrition, control of diarrheal diseases, malaria, and sustainability.

To increase the available technical assistance to rural agricultural families in countries where Peace Corps volunteers (PCVs) work. The program will facilitate the transfer of technical expertise from experienced U.S. agriculturalists and resource management professionals to host country farmers and to PCVs who are involved in agriculture and natural resource activities. In Farmer-to-Farmer (FTF) focus countries, Peace Corps will work directly with the FTF implementor to request an FTF volunteer. In countries where there is no other FTF implementor, Peace Corps will recruit and field the FTF volunteer. This will prove especially important in the west and central regions of Africa where there are no U.S. Agency for International Development-funded FTF implementors. It is envisioned that at least 6 to 10 FTF requests per year will occur in the Africa region.

To produce curricula and background articles geared toward middle and high school students based on the thematic topic, "Enhancing U.S. Public Awareness for Mountains: A Global Resource." The development education content of these materials will focus on three key elements: (1) commonalities of mountain ecosystems, mountain communities, and mountain problems worldwide; (2) history and value of U.S. foreign assistance toward conservation of mountain environments, advancement of mountain cultural heritage, and improvement of livelihoods for mountain people; and (3) domestic applicability of lessons learned in international development projects to U.S. mountain environments. To present and receive information and ideas on the role and impact of foreign aid in an increasingly globalized economy. This project builds on NPA's successful development education project from 1993-1997 and will be conducted in partnership with the National Alliance of Business (NAB) and the International Union of Bricklayers and Allied Craftworkers (BAC). Business and labor leaders will have the opportunity to share their views with policymakers at the U.S. Agency for International Development and other public and private sector development assistance officials. The project will foster interest in and discussion about current development assistance strategies by soliciting business and labor views on what those strategies should be. Discussions will cover such topics as emerging markets, worker rights, microenterprise development, education and training, rural development, and regional trade. Project activities include workshops on development issues, a symposium bringing together 50 business and labor representatives for a face-to-face discussion, and a lecture by a prominent development expert in Washington, D.C. The project will also include the publication of the lecture as a monograph, a series of four articles on international development in NAB and BAC journals, a quarterly newsletter published by NPA on development issues, and project information on partner websites.

To build on Partners' current project with the National Council of La Raza and add a strategic partnership with the Hispanic Council on International Relations. This project is a one-year follow-on partnership to the current Partners project, "Partners Reach Out to the Hispanic American Community." The purpose of the project is to increase awareness of international development programs and issues through public education and outreach efforts targeted at the Hispanic American community. The project will use Partners' U.S. network, in collaboration with members of the Hispanic Council on International Relations and affiliates of the National Council of La Raza, to carry out community outreach programs using the local/global development linkages between the United States and Latin America. Major project activities will focus on public events at both the local and national level (town hall meetings and forums) and a targeted educational media campaign at the local level in five states. These activities will address local/global linkages between U.S. community development and international development, specifically, trade and economic integration, social and economic development, and the impact on immigration, community development, and citizen participation.

To collaborate with the National Peace Corps Association to produce and disseminate presentation and teaching materials for educators around the theme "The World of Child Six-Billion." With the world poised to enter the new millennium, world population will achieve a record 6 billion people. The birth of the child who puts the population at this record will energize educators to discuss world population growth and its implications for human progress. The materials for this project are timeless, but particularly well suited for many specific events such as Peace Corps Day, Earth Day, and World Population Day. This project has already garnered the support of the Peace Corps Office of Domestic Programs through World Wise Schools and the National Geographic Society, which will broaden its dissemination network. This project will provide a broad overview of the world in which Child Six-Billion is likely to live. Using developing country examples, the project will connect specific local concerns to larger human development issues and to people in the United States. Ideally, understanding these connections will help Americans understand that foreign assistance is in their best interest. Learning materials include "The World of Child Six-Billion" guide, curricular and presentation guides, and presentations by educators to students and the community.

To increase the available technical assistance to rural agricultural families in countries where Peace Corps volunteers (PCVs) work. The program will facilitate the transfer of technical expertise from experienced U.S. agriculturalists and resource management professionals to host country farmers and to PCVs who are involved in agriculture and natural resource activities. In Farmer-to-Farmer (FTF) focus countries, Peace Corps will work directly with the FTF implementor to request an FTF volunteer. In countries where there is no other FTF implementor, Peace Corps will recruit and field the FTF volunteer. This will prove especially important in the west and central regions of Africa where there are no U.S. Agency for International Development-funded FTF implementors. It is envisioned that at least 6 to 10 FTF requests per year will occur in the Africa region.
