Working Document: 5036 TCMP

A joint initiative between the National Environmental Management Council, the University of Rhode Island/Coastal Resources Center and the United States Agency for International Development.

PREFACE

The Tanzania Coastal Management Partnership (TCMP) established Science and Technical Working Group (STWG) in July 1999. TCMP is a joint initiative between the Government of Tanzania, the National Environmental Management Council, the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) and the Coastal Resources Center (CRC) of the University of Rhode Island (URI). The main goal of TCMP is to establish the foundation for effective coastal management in Tanzania. TCMP is committed to working with the existing network of Integrated Coastal Management (ICM) programme and practitioners to facilitate a participatory transparent process to unite the Government and the community, science and management, sectoral and public interests with a primary goal of conservation and development of coastal ecosystems and resource. STWG is intended to provide the primary bridge between coastal managers and the science community studying coastal marine issues at the local and national level. More specifically, STWG provides a clearinghouse mechanism for the integration of science and better coastal management. The Institute of Marine Sciences (IMS) of the University of Dar es Salaam provides the Secretariat to the STWG and the IMS Director is the Chairperson of the Group.

One of the areas that can be used to enhance communication among marine scientists and coastal managers in Tanzania is through identification of institutions and individuals that are engaged in marine related research or involved in one way or another with coastal zone management activities. This was the reason behind a decision by the STWG to create the directory of marine scientists working in Tanzania. This directory is unique in the sense that it includes a list of scientists and resource managers from all over Tanzania. This directory has the largest number of marine scientists working in Tanzania than any other existing directories, such as the one produced by RECOSCIX, which has only scientists from University of Dar es Salaam and TAFIRI.

It is therefore with great pleasure that the secretariat for the Science and Technical Working Group (STWG) is publishing the first comprehensive directory of marine scientists working in Tanzania. This document provides all the names, qualification, research areas of interest, and contact addresses for most marine scientists working in Tanzania. The Directory is published in both hard copies as well as in the Internet through the Institute of Marine Sciences Web site to facilitate wider access. It will be regularly updated to include more members and revise current qualifications, positions and fields of interest. It is the expectation of TCMP that the directory will serve as an essential communication tool between scientists and managers and enhance the exchange of information for both local and foreign interested parties.

The Science and Technical Working Group facilitated the production of this directory for TCMP. STWG would like to thank Edna E. Nyika, Aviti J. Mmochi and Jim Tobey who made the production of this Directory a reality. Thanks are also due to all the individuals and institutions who responded to the questionnaires. It is not possible to name all of you here, but the generous support from National Environmental Management Council (NEMC), Institute of Marine Sciences (IMS) and the Coastal Resources Center (CRC), University of Rhode Island is gratefully acknowledged.
