MEDIA ADVOCACY WORKSHOP REPORT

The Workshop was jointly organized by the Caribbean Institute of Media and Communication (CARIMAC) of the University of the West Indies and Youth.Now, a project of Jamaica’s Ministry of Health funded by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) and implemented by Futures Group International. Livingston White and Corinne Barnes of CARIMAC facilitated the workshop while Newton Wynter and Sharon Hunt of Youth.Now provided administrative support.

The Workshop was held March 8-9, 2004 at The Four Seasons Hotel in Kingston with the following participants:

1. Alison Hall
2. Andrae Jackson
3. Betty-Ann Williams
4. Christine Callam
5. Debbie-Ann Scott
6. Durrant Lyn
7. Hoseanna Hale
8. Hylton Grace
9. Jean Sangster-Bennett
10. Jodine Williams
11. Kwame Thomas
12. Lorette Wedderburn-Ellis
13. Morrick Spencer
14. Newton Wynter
15. Nickolette Gordon
16. Nyala Rhoden
17. Okeno Walters
18. Pauline Russell-Brown
19. Richard Robinson
20. Rosalee Parkins
21. Ruth Brown
22. Sharon Hunt
23. Shernette Reynolds
24. Susan Gallimore
25. Theresa Gaynor
26. Tracey Litchmore

Most of the participants had been involved in previous workshops held in Manchester, St. Elizabeth, Kingston and St. Elizabeth organized by Youth.Now. This specific workshop was designed to sensitise the Adolescent Reproductive Health (ARH) advocates to the operation of the print and electronic media so as to enable them to access these media with their messages aimed at social and behaviour change.
DAY 1- MONDAY, MARCH 8, 2004

Following registration on Tuesday, the first day of the workshop, the facilitators administered a Knowledge Pre-Test to ascertain the level of information the participants were exposed to with concepts such as advocacy, news, feature, press release and PSA. Workshop manuals, created by compiling notes on topics to be covered in the workshop, were distributed to participants.

The Pre-Test revealed that the participants were at various knowledge levels. There were those who were comfortable with media terminology and could easily explain the concepts, while there were others who did not have a clear understanding of the media jargon. One concept that seemed to have baffled most participants was PSA. The Knowledge Pre-Test is attached as Appendix III.

The participants were also required to complete a Needs Assessment Form. This Form indicated that participants had attended the workshop with various expectations. Most were expecting to leave the workshop with higher levels of communication skills and a better understanding of media advocacy. Others also expected to leave with better debating skills as well as more information on Adolescent Reproductive Health. A copy of the Needs Assessment Form is attached as Appendix I.

After the Pre-Test, Livingston White led the group through a revision exercise where he looked at terminologies and concepts related to media advocacy.

He spoke about the format which advocates may want their messages to take. These include face to face meetings, public rallies, policy forums and public debate. He also explained the terms “medium”, “message” and “advocacy.”
During the morning session the participants were introduced to their need for media advocacy skills, the various types of mass media, how to aim messages at specific audiences, news value and the qualities of a media advocate. This was done using a powerpoint slide presentation. Powerpoint presentations done during workshop are attached as Appendix V.

Following Mr. White’s presentation on those issues the participants were divided into four groups reflecting their geographical location as follows:

Participants from St. Elizabeth and Clarendon were placed in one group; those from St. Ann and St. Catherine in another; Westmoreland, Hanover and St. James in another and Kingston and St. Andrew in another making it four groups together.

Each group was required to construct a Media Contact List. The list from all four groups were to be combined. The aim was to have each advocate leaving the workshop with a comprehensive media contact list which would be the starting point in getting messages to the media. A copy of this media contact list is attached as Appendix VII.

Each group was also required to make contact with at least one media house and arrange for an interview on any issue regarding adolescent reproductive health. One group was able to make contact with Smile Jamaica, a local current affairs programme aired on Television Jamaica (TVJ) daily. Two participants, Hylton Grace and Andrae Jackson were selected to represent the participants on that programme. At the subsequent interview conducted live on TVJ on Tuesday, March 9 at 7:00 a.m., the representatives were able to talk about their relationship with Youth.Now, Adolescent Reproductive Health, the role of the advocates and the success which they have had since the implementation of the programme. Other groups made contact with other programmes such as Beyond the Headlines aired on Radio Jamaica. The producers for that programme were unable to accommodate the group that afternoon.

The afternoon session focused on tools that the participants would need in gaining access to the media. This session which was facilitated by Corinne Barnes led the participants through concepts such as a Press Release, how it is written, what should be included in the Release as well as strategies to be employed to ensure a high probability of publication.

Other concepts that were looked at included ‘The Media Advisory,’ what it is and the kinds of information that should be included in the advisory. The impact of ‘Letters to the Editor’ in placing certain issues on the public was also highlighted.

The participants were also introduced to the importance of ‘Fact Sheets’ and how to plan and conduct ‘Press Conferences’ in getting their message to their target audiences.

At the end of this session participants were required to write a Fact Sheet and two Press Releases – one for Print and one for Radio. The Press Release for Radio was sent to Power 106 and this was carried on the 8 o’clock newscast that evening. The Release for Print was sent to the Jamaica Observer but this was not published in that paper. Copies of these releases and fact sheets are attached as Appendix VIII.

DAY 2 – TUESDAY, MARCH 9, 2004

On the second day of the workshop the facilitators took the participants on a tour of three media organisations, Power 106 Radio station, The Daily Observer newspaper and SportsMax/Financial Channel Cable outfit.
At Power 106, the morning Editor, Christopher Sirjue spoke to the participants about his role in the news gathering process and the role of the gatekeepers in general, and how they would be able to access the news programmes with information which they would like to reach their target audience.

The participants were able to ask questions and some had their misconceptions cleared up while others left with a better understanding of how “news” actually gets from the reporter to the airwaves.

Dervan Malcolm, a presenter/producer with Power 106 also spoke to the participants about his job and his role in the news gathering process.

The participants also had a chance to visit the studios of Music ’99 which is located in the Power 106 complex. There they were able to get a first hand glance of how an “all music” format station operates.

The next stop took the group to The Daily Observer’s new offices on Beechwood Avenue in Kingston where the marketing department had arranged a tour of the complex. In the editorial department, Pete Sankey, News Editor spoke to the group about the stories which are published in the The Daily Observer and the role of the reporters, the sub-editors and the editors in the process. Participants wanted to know about the issues which are taken into consideration in the story selection process and the importance accorded to each article. Mr. Sankey explained that it all had to do with the news editors and other gatekeepers judgment.

From the Jamaica Observer on Beechwood Avenue, the participants journeyed to New Kingston to the studios of Financial Channel/Sports Max. Here they were given a tour of the cable channel. Claudette Robinson, Production Manager and Christopher McIntosh, Managing Director, outlined how the channel obtains its content while engineer, David Cassanova took the group through the technical aspects of getting the content on the air. The participants showed a lot of interest in this aspect of the operation.

On returning to the hotel for the last session of the two-day workshop Mr. White took the participants through a number of other media terms and concepts as well as methods which are available to get the message to their audiences. The “PSA” – Public Service Announcement concept was explained. He also introduced the group to non-traditional ways of getting their messages out. These methods include the use of drama, songs and music.

He also spoke to the participants about speaking skills, visual communication skills and listening skills.

The two-day workshop ended at 4:00 p.m. after the participants had completed a Feedback Form and a Knowledge Post-Test.

The Knowledge Post-Test (Attached as Appendix IV) indicated that many of the participants who were unsure of some media terms were able to more clearly articulate those terms at the end of the workshop. These concepts had been defined throughout the workshop and were also included in the Workshop Manual to which they had easy access.

The Feedback Forms (Attached as Appendix II) indicated that most of the participants felt that the workshop had met their expectations strongly agreeing with statements like:

- I now understand what advocacy means
- I now understand how advocacy is applied
- The workshop was very informative
The workshop met my expectations
I have learnt something new at the workshop
The materials covered were adequate
I felt motivated to pursue the advocacy activities of my organisation.

The workshop participants were asked to indicate their level of satisfaction with the workshop facilitators by strongly agreeing, agreeing, disagreeing, strongly disagreeing with the following statements:

The instructor was well prepared
The instructor was knowledgeable
The instructor was a good facilitator
The instructor treated everyone with respect
Methods of delivery were appropriate
The instructor inspired me to learn more about advocacy
The instructor answered my questions in a satisfactory manner

Almost all the participants answered “strongly agree” to those statements.

The writing aspect of the workshop seemed to have made an impression on most of the participants as “writing press releases” emerged as a popular area when the Feedback Form asked participants to list three or more areas that they felt the workshop covered best.

Verbal feedback also indicated that the participants were highly appreciative of the tour of the media organisations as that activity gave them a better understanding of the operations of those entities.

Some general recommendations made by the workshop participants included:
1. The workshop should cover interviewing techniques
2. The Youth.Now project should continue for another five years
3. The workshop should cover voice training

Youth.now trains advocates in media relations
Twenty-seven Adolescent Reproductive Health (ARH) Advocates met on March 8 and 9 at the Hotel Four Seasons in Kingston, for training in media relations. Policy and advocacy coordinator of Youth.now, Newton Wynter stated that these individuals were chosen based on their levels of participation in their parishes.

The aim of this workshop was to equip the members of nine already existing parish advocacy groups to become media savvy as well as to encourage participants to be more proactive and proficient in conveying ARH messages to youths using the mass media.

Participants were exposed to gaining “experience in working with the media” as stated by Livingston White, workshop facilitator. This hands-on experience allowed the advocates to learn how to use mass media in reinforcing to youths the importance of practising healthy reproductive behaviours.

Youth.now, a joint project of USAID and the Government of Jamaica, hopes to continue hosting such workshops to provide necessary skills for its youth advocates. The main aim of the Youth.now project is to improve the reproductive health of adolescents using community-based approaches and involving young people in their own development.

As a means of stimulating interest and strengthening the communication skill of their advocates, Youth.now (Jamaica Adolescent Reproductive Health Project, funded by USAID) hosted a two-day Media Advocacy workshop at the Hotel Four Season in Kingston. Twenty motivated and enthused individuals from across the island were gathered for training on media usage as an instrument to advocate on issues relating to Adolescent Sexual Reproductive Health.

As a part of the training they were introduced to several strategies and were given guided tours of media houses and their operation.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

March 10, 2004

FIRST MEDIA ADVOCACY WORKSHOP FOR YOUTH.NOW

The Media Advocacy training saw twenty-seven advocates from nine parishes acquiring skills necessary for using the media in advocating for Adolescent Reproductive Health (ARH). A new phase in ARH in Jamaica, the aim was to increase advocates' ability to target stakeholders to influence change in policies and guidelines towards adolescent and their Reproductive Health.

Held at the Hotel Four Seasons in Kingston, on March 8th and 9th, the workshop fell under the ambit of Policy Advocacy, a focal point of the Youth.now project over the past two years. As stated by Chief of Party at Youth.now, Dr. Pauline Russell-Brown, “These new skills enable the establishment of media advocacy geared at getting the public’s interest and engagement in matters of Adolescent Reproductive Health.”

Youth.now is a United States Agency for International Development (USAID) funded project implemented by Futures Group International on behalf of the Government of Jamaica. The project is geared at improving the Reproductive Health of young people in Jamaica. The project is a five year program that

Mrs. Corinne Barnes, lecturer at Caribbean Institute for Media and Communication (CARIMAC) stated, “This workshop is one of the ways to get issues of concern to the wider public. The workshop is very timely and provides a bridge between policy makers and young people.” Richard Robinson, an advocate from St. Elizabeth, indicated that the training provided “competence in preparing details and having the media support issues and realize their involvement as a stakeholder.”

The advocates identified an issue relevant to adolescents in their respective parish that they say needs immediate change and hope to encourage stakeholders to change policies on these issues.
FIRST MEDIA WORKSHOP FOR YOUTH.NOW PROJECT

Twenty-seven (27) youth advocates from the Jamaica Adolescent Reproductive Health Project (Youth.now) today completed a two-day workshop on Media Advocacy at Hotel Four Seasons in Kingston. This workshop provided advocates with skills to use media to raise awareness about adolescent sexual and reproductive health and to advocate for improvements in policies and programmes to bring about positive changes in behaviour as well as policies. The workshop provided an opportunity for advocates to visit print media houses, radio stations and local cable channels. Here, advocates were able to get firsthand knowledge of how media houses work. Chief of Party, Dr. Pauline Russell-Brown stated that this workshop was very timely and fulfilling.

Youth.now is a joint project of the USAID and the government of Jamaica, implemented by the Futures Group International.
Press Release
Youth.now Advocacy

On Tuesday March 9, 2004 over twenty five youth advocates from all over Jamaica toured the offices of the Jamaica Observer and two of the participants appeared on TVJ’s Smile Jamaica. They were engaging in a training on Media Advocacy Skills organized by the Jamaica Adolescent Reproductive Health (ARH) Project, Youth.now. Youth.now is a five year project funded by USAID for adolescents 10-19 years old, in nine Parishes.

The Advocates were exposed to various aspects of the Media, including Writing Press Releases, organizing Press Conferences and the Development of skills for advocacy.

Newton Wynter, Youth.now’s Policy and Advocacy Coordinator, explained that, “The primary purpose of the training was that the advocates could benefit more from an in depth media advocacy training.” With this training the advocates would begin to lobby for Adolescent Reproductive Health issues in a more efficient and effective way via the media.

The advocates have been previously trained to develop and maintain networks at the community level, where they try to influence policy decisions as they relate to ARH.

Richard Robinson, a participant expressed that, he had always seen press conferences and press releases, through the media, however doing this workshop has given him a better understanding of the Media.

APPENDIX VIII

The following four fact sheets were prepared by workshop participants.

(1)

Background/Fact Sheet.

The Jamaica Adolescent Reproductive Health Project, Youth.now is a five year programme funded by USAID for adolescent 10-19 years old. It currently operates in nine Parishes in Jamaica. The objectives of the programme includes:

- Increase Knowledge and skills of adolescents and service providers
- Improve Access to Reproductive Health Services
- Improve the Policy and Advocacy environment of Adolescent Reproductive Health

One of the strategies Youth.now used to meet objective three was to train a number of Youth Advocates from various organizations. The Advocates’ primary responsibilities were to form a basic advocacy network at the community level, to agitate for a number of changes.
Fact Sheet: Adolescent Pregnancy and Childbearing in Jamaica

March, 2004

- For several decades, 20% of births annually are to women under 20 years.
- Approximately 83% of adolescent pregnancies are mistimed or unwanted.
- Young females are also reluctant to seek health care during pregnancy because they fear how health care workers will treat them based on their own previous negative experiences at these clinics or recounts from other patients their age.
- Approximately 40% of females each year experience pregnancy at least once before age 20.
- In 1997, girls under 15 years of age identified a clinic or a friend as their primary sources of sexual health information. Boys identified peers and relatives as information sources.
- In 1997, approximately 86% of young women and 76% of young men, ages 15-24, reported receiving Family Life Education (FLE), as stipulated in the National Reproductive Health curriculum. For many youth, however, FLE begins too late.
- The majority of girls begin FLE at age 13 or later, an estimated 17% of girls become pregnant while in primary school.

Youth.now, the Jamaica Adolescent Reproductive Health Activity, is a 5-year project of the Ministry of Health, implemented by Futures Group with funding from the US Agency for International Development. Highlights of Youth.now achievements in the four years are:

1. Expanded access to services for adolescents through pharmacies and Ministry of Health clinics.
   - Youth friendly services (clinical and non-clinical) available at more than 100 ‘locations’ in the 9 target parishes. Sites offer education and counselling with referral to clinical care.
2. More than 200 pharmacists, 227 clinic-based public sector service personnel and 12 agents trained to provide quality services.
3. 45 pastors and church youth leaders were trained as facilitators in Christian Family Life Education (CFLE) bringing to 60 the total number of pastors and church youth leaders trained in CFLE.
5. Production of advocacy tools – (i) Advocacy Kits and (ii) Fact Sheets.
6. Successful implementation of seven parish seminars on reproductive health rights of adolescents.
7. Publication of results of the 2002 expanded ARH Policy Environment Score (PES) survey. Analysis of these data indicates an overall 7.3% point change in policy environment score between 2001 and 2003. The most significant change was in the area of “Policy Formulation”.
FACT SHEET:
YOUTH IN THE MEDIA

The Adolescent Reproductive Health Project within the Ministry of Health (Youth.now) saw the need for young people to become more actively involved in advocating for issues directly related to Adolescent Reproductive Health (ARH). In 2003, a selection of persons, from various organizations across the island, were trained to lobby for the improvement of Jamaica's ARH to key policy makers and stakeholders.

In an effort to further enhance the skills of these trained advocates; twenty members from the Youth.now Advocacy Network were selected to participate in a Media Advocacy Training. The training was held at the Hotel Four Seasons in Kingston, Jamaica. The workshop was facilitated by CARIMAC (Caribbean Institute of Media and Communication).

Media Advocacy Training

The Media reaches a wide cross section of individuals, and consequently, it is one of the strongest tool for influencing behaviour change. Young people are often described has TV junkies and music fanatics. This signifies that they are tuned in to the media with individuals often singling out various areas within the media that they prefer. It is with this in mind that the Youth.now project developed the idea to train their advocates in the area of Media Advocacy.

At the beginning of the workshop it was communicated that it would be very interactive.

- The training covered a range of content and activities:
- Definitions of media advocacy and what it involves
- The creation of a media directory
- Initiation of contacts by advocates with the various media houses to gain public support via interviews and features
- Prepare press-releases and fact-sheets for dissemination to media houses
- Field visits to media houses including:
At the end of this training, Mr. Newton Wynter (Advocacy Manager), Youth.now, stated that "at the end of this training the advocates will go to their networks and apply what was done." He also added that he hopes that the training will stimulate public's interest.

Overall, the training was successful in its aim of equipping advocates with the basic knowledge and skills to effectively lobby for Adolescent Reproductive Health (ARH) as well as related issues was achieved.
